LOAN SHARK KING ARRESTED AGAIN

MONEY LENDER DEFIANT

Refuses to Stop Business Outside of New Jersey, Despite Court Decree.

BUSY OFFICE IN BOSTON

Daniel H. Tolman, the "loan shark king," who was fined $1,000 in Trenton, N. J., and ordered to stay out of the loan business for three years, was arrested today in New York and charged with usury.

Magistrate Levy issued the warrant. The charge is that Tolman loaned a complainant $20 for which $15 was to be paid in six week.

Tolman today issued a defiance to the New Jersey court and declared that he would continue to do business outside that State, in spite of the court's order.

His office at No. 201 Devonshire street is open and doing a rushing business.

At his home at No. 90 North Montalto avenue, Montclair, N. J., he said:

"I do not intend to abandon my business in any State outside of New Jersey because of the sentence imposed on me by Judge Gaichtel.

"The charge for which I was sentenced in New Jersey is merely a technical one and not one of moral turpitude. It is no crime to loan money in New Jersey or anywhere else. If I had taken my case into the Appellate Courts instead of throwing myself upon the mercy of the lower courts I am sure that I would not have been convicted.

Gives Up New Jersey Business.

"The sentence imposed was a great surprise to me, and as yet I have not fully decided upon my future plans. However, I shall comply with the terms of the sentence so far as they relate to New Jersey. In fact, I have already given up my three offices in this State. They were located in Trenton, Newark and Jersey City. But as I have said, I shall continue to do business in New York and Brooklyn and in the other offices which I conduct throughout the United States."

An AMERICAN reporter saw men and women enter and leave the Tolman office on the second landing of the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Company building at the corner of Franklin and Devonshire streets. This is an imposing and modern office building.

A walk down a crooked entry to the right leads you to Tolman's office, No. 204, on the glass in black letters appears the name "D. H. Tolman" and under the name are the words, "Commercial Paper."

The office is narrow. At roll top desks near the windows sat two women clerks, one girlish, the other much older and

Schooners Crash in Pollock Rip

Dillaway Proceeds, but Romeo Anchors to Await Help.

Two coasting schooners were in collision in Pollock Rip Slue early today. The two-master Romeo, out of Providence for St. John was dismasted and anchored to wait for help. The Samuel Dillaway was not damaged and continued on her way.

The Monomoy Point life saving station sighted the Romeo when a light fog lifted. A crew found her sound, and returned to summon a revenue cutter from Boston.

Captain W. Sprague was in command of the Romeo. The Dillaway carried eight men. The Romeo lost her bowsprit and both masts.

Hunt Tunnel Cash at Paragon Park!

If you wish both pleasure and profit, be sure to be at Paragon Park tomorrow when the "Tunnelling" is good.

The Herr Professor Kellerman has written a wonderful story called "The Tunnel." It deals with the gigantic task of linking Europe and America under ground by tunnel. It is more fascinating, even, than Jules Verne's tales.

The AMERICAN will print "The Tunnel" serially, beginning next Monday. It will soon be recognized by readers as the wonder story of 1913.

What has that to do with Paragon Park? Just this. The fact of this story starting Monday suggested to the AMERICAN the idea of some other tunnels for Sunday, as follows:

THE AMERICAN WILL DISTRIBUTE ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-NINE CARDBOARD TUNNELS AT PARAGON PARK TOMORROW BETWEEN 10 A. M. AND 6 P. M.

Each one of these tunnels will contain a cash order for a sum of money ranging from fifty dollars down to one dollar. The entire cash value of the total orders will be $300.

Better be there and try for some of this money.

Blues Are Victors in Game of War

Reds Failed to Prevent Merging of Defenders.

MIDDLEBORO, Aug. 2.—With a victory for the defending Blues, the war game ended at 11:40 today. General G. H. Priest's Red Army failed to prevent the junction of the Blue defenders, and when the "war" ended the Blues were concentrated near the Middleboro railroad station, stopping the Red march on Boston.

General F. Leroy Sweetser commanded the defending forces. Two spectacular battles were fought in Everett square, Middleboro, and at Abbot Heights, near the railroad bridge.

Increase in Boston Tax Rate Probable

Latest figures compiled by Boston assessors indicate that this year's tax rate, to be announced about August 12, will be increased between 50 cents and $1 over the 1912 rate of $16.40 per thousand, the probable rate being $17.25.

The principal factor occasioning the increase is the $500,000 advance in the assessment which the city has to pay the State this Fall, this increase alone adding 30 cents a thousand to the old rate. Another reason is the unusual shrinkage in personal property valuations this year.

BOLTS HIT IN MANY SUBURBS

Lightning Starts Fires Throughout Greater Boston—3 Churches Struck.

STREETS ARE FLOODED

Thousands of dollars' worth of damage was caused by lightning and resulting fires, transportation was delayed, streets and roads were flooded and women and children were severely frightened by a renewal today of the electric storm which swept up through New England in the night.

A bolt struck one corner of L. B. Huntley's barn at North Sudbury. Fencing was broken so that the flooring of the cow linter gave way. Four cows in the linter were let down as though in the "drop" of a quadruple scaffold. The luckless beasts were tied by the neck a stanchions, and so hung suspended and dead.

Three Churches Struck.

Electric light, trolley and telephone services were hampered or crippled in many communities.

Churches were targets for lightning. St. Chrysostom's, Quincy, was damaged to the extent of $2,000 by lightning and fire. The First Baptist Church steeple, Waltham, was shattered by a bolt. In Concord the Congregational steeple was ripped open.

I. A. Emery's three-story brick stable in Haverhill was struck and burned. Henry Lee, stableman, was stunned by the shock, but recovered in time to rescue thirteen horses. A storehouse of Randall B. Day at Groveland Bridge was burned.

Damage of $100 was done to Knight's cotton mill at Hyde Park by fire, caused by a bolt.

$7,000 Tewksbury Fire.

The big house and barn of Daniel Seaver, West Tewksbury, were burned with a loss of $7,000. Neighbors said the Lowell Fire Department declined, in answer to telephone calls, to make the four-mile run.

A bolt sent bricks flying from a chimney on the Longfellow Grammar School at Roslindale. Daniel Towle's house on Marion place, Everett, was slightly damaged by lightning.

Lightning struck and broke a water main on Lynn Fells parkway in Melrose and the fire alarm and telephone systems were put out of order. The Wyoming section of Melrose was flooded, with two feet of water in many cellars.

A bolt bored through the roof of Martin Burman's house at No. 14 Franklin place, Revere, and drove Mr. and Mrs. Burman from their beds.

Crew Overcome on Submarine

Medical Aid Rushed to Victims Off Provincetown.

PROVINCETOWN, Aug. 2.—Several of the crew of the United States submarine G 6 were overcome by gasoline fumes while engaged in recharging hereelectrical batteries off Long Point, today.

The submarine, which is having her official trials, on the measured mile off here, signalled for medical assistance when she was just outside Long Point and apparently heading for sea. At the moment she signalled she came about, and coming inside the point, sent her tender ashore.

The tender returned to the submarine later, with two physicians and a quantity of ammonia.

The G 6 lies about a mile and a half out from here.

Crisis in Detroit's 3-Cent Fare Fight

Mayor Advises People to Pay No More After Wednesday.

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—Interesting developments in Detroit's fight for three-cent fares are expected next Thursday, when three-cent fares will be in effect. Mayor Marx today advised all passengers to refuse to pay more than three cents and demand transfers. The Detroit United Railways will probably refuse to accept the three-cent fare and an interesting battle is looked for.

Allow Gypsy Girl to Take Babe to Prison

GLOUCESTER, Aug. 2.—Marie Jos, a twenty-two-year-old gypsy girl, was so overcome being parted from her six months-old baby, when sentenced to four months in jail by Judge York in the Gloucester District Court today, that the court granted her plea to take the baby to prison with her. Marie and her sisters Amelia and Lena were charged with working a "fimfam" game on Dr. Charles Morrill and Elias Sperry, from whom they obtained $16 and $40, respectively.

Urge Engineering Course in School

Young men disposed to take up heating, ventilating engineering and architectural drafting, in the public schools may have that opportunity through the efforts of Mayor Fitzgerald. The Mayor says he is going to suggest to the school committee the advisability of taking up those subjects, perhaps as a post graduate course in the high schools.

Mayor Entertains Russian Students

Mayor Fitzgerald entertained the group of Russian students on a visit to this city, by giving them a ride down the harbor and a lunch at the Pemberton Inn. Tomorrow they will be guests of the city on a ride through the park system. Next week a body of German students will come here.

Mayor on Visit to His Sons in Camp

Mayor Fitzgerald has gone to Ashland, N. H., to spend Sunday with his three sons, who are camping there. He expects to return Monday. Week after next he will probably return to Nahant Pier with Mrs. Fitzgerald and their two daughters for a vacation of ten days or more.

PUTS PINKERTON AT WORK ON MYSTERY

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 2.—Mrs. John H. Hanan has herself taken charge of the investigation of the theft of $150,000 worth of her jewels ten days ago.

Disgusted with "comic opera sleuths," she called in B. M. Goldowsk, a former Pinkerton man, now conducting the National Detective Agency in Providence, and gave Mr. Goldowski all the facts in her possession, directing him to proceed with the inquiry.

CLOSE WATCH ON HOUSE.

As a result, a strict watch is being kept today on two houses—one in South Boston and one in Providence, where it is suspected the stolen jewels may be hidden.

Mrs. Hanan's action follows an offer of immunity to the thief which she made yesterday, and it is now believed she will prosecute the search and send the criminal to prison. She hoped the gems would be returned—secretly as they were taken—but now has given up this hope.

Goldowski has fifteen men at work. Mrs. Hanan gave him the records of all her servants as she knew them. She is convinced, her intimates say, that a maid servant in her employ committed the theft in her home.

Trail Brown Graduate.

Goldowski set men at work on the "Brown graduate" who has grown suddenly rich—and who has at the same time grown exceedingly intimate with servants employed in Narragansett homes. One of Mrs. Hanan's maids has visited this man's house. It was learned today.

Charles C. Rumsey, whose wife lost jewels worth $100,000, has discharged the Burns men he originally hired, and has given Goldowski a list of the gems his wife lost, with permission to "go ahead and do your best."

Following the report of two additional breaks, Chief of Police James D. Caswell caused a sensation today by saying:

"Both the Hanan and the Rumsey robberies are bluffs. They were simply framed up for advertising purposes. The jewels that are supposed to have been stolen I believe never left the houses and if permission was given me to search for them I haven't any doubt but what they would be recovered."

Chief Caswell made this statement after it was discovered the Summer homes of Professor Brander Matthews of Columbia University, and Fred Mansfield, proprietor of the Crown Hotel at Providence, had been broken into and ransacked.

The property taken from the Mansfield home, "Elberon," is said to have been worth several thousand dollars. The value of the loot secured in the Matthews break cannot be ascertained, as the fam-

Foss, Goetting and McCarthy Together

Off to War Game in Same Auto; Beacon Hill Stunned.

When Governor Foss left the State House in an automobile at 10.30 today for the war games in Plymouth county he left behind a group of gaping politicians and newspaper men, for comfortably seated in the roomy tonneau with the smiling Governor were Colonel August H. Goetting of Springfield, who recently announced his candidacy for the lieutenant-governor, and Jeremiah J. McCarthy, formerly Republican surveyor of the port and more recently active in the Bull Moose movement in Boston.

The party arrived in Middleboro too late to witness the closing battle, which ended at 11:40, but the astonishment of some of the militiamen, who are interested in politics in piping times of peace, at the Governor's company, was only equalled by the inscrutable smiles that wreathed the faces of the Democratic-Republican-Bull Moose occupants of the car.

fly is traveling in Europe and the cottage, "Shinglenook," was closed.

Mrs. Hanan Changes Mind.

The report that Mrs. Hanan is considering an offer for her property, including "Shore Acres," the Casino and several cottages caused consternation among the wealthy set at the Pier today. Mrs. Hanan is said to be disgusted with the petty jealousies and mean tricks of some of her neighbors and the notoriety caused by the robbery in her house may cause her to give up the Hanan property at the Pier. She owns 380 acres of land on McStarrin's Hill, the highest point in Rhode Island, and it is said she may move to an estate there.

A sudden change in Mrs. Hanan's opinion of the identity of the thief is another development in the case causing considerable comment. Heretofore she has stoutly maintained that nobody in the household took the jewels and declared she was a firm believer in the golden rule.

Rumsey Discouraged.

Charles Carey Rumsey has practically given up hope of ever recovering the jewels stolen from his home. He has discharged the detectives employed to track down the thieves and has apparently become resigned to his loss. The dismissing of the detectives led to the belief that the Rumsey jewels had been returned. Rumsey denied the report and said he refused to be bled.

Clew after clew has been run down by the "dude detectives," as Chief Caswell calls them, but it was said today that are no nearer a solution of the mystery than when the robbery was discovered a week ago. Chief Dixon, who has charge of the Hanan detectives, has left Narragansett Pier on a secret mission. He declared he would return with at least a part of the property stolen from "Shore Acres."

Saloon Holdup Man Freed.

Promising to live a better life and take the total abstinence pledge, Bert Wells of Plainfield, who was charged by Patrolman Flaherty of the East Dedham street station with entering a saloon on Harrison avenue and holding up the bartender for a drink at the point of an empty 38-calibre revolver, was allowed his freedom after receiving a severe lecture from Judge Murray in the Municipal Court.

Declares Wreck of Titanic Is Found

British Captain Reports Sighting Derelict at Scene of Disaster.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—Captain Remnant of he British steamer Lucilline reports sighting a partially submerged wreck off Cape Race, where the Titanic was lost in the greatest maritime disaster of history. The marine growth on the hulk is of a period corresponding with that of the Titanic's sinking.

The fact that the hulk stands above water after a year indicates, hydrographers say, the presence of an expansive ledge underneath. The United States ocean survey will at once start an investigation to find if such a ledge exists.

Captain Remnant is of the opinion that the section sighted was the forward part of the ship, the Titanic, it was said, having split in two before sinking.

more experienced. The latter is Tolman's confidential clerk in charge of the Boston branch of his amazing chain of offices.

In the Office Three Years.

The furnishings consist of the two desks, a few chairs and a letter press. Tolman has occupied the office three years, and, according to attaches of the building, has done a "land office" small loan business. One of the men in the building said his lease expires soon and that the proprietors are not anxious to have him renew it.

"You ought to see the clients flock in on Saturdays to pay their interest," said one of the elevator men. "They look like a flock of sheep. Most of them are women. I have often pitied them. I don't know anything about the rates charged, but some of them look down in luck and all are of the working class. Tolman has more callers than any six offices in the building, which is going some. I have counted more than 250 on a Saturday alone."

When an AMERICAN reporter stepped into the office to interview Mr. Tolman he was told that Mr. Tolman was out of town and might not return for two weeks or five months.

Tolman is always absent. He has a license to conduct small loans. His license is No. 81.

The official records state that "H. M. Wilson" is manager of Tolman's Boston office.

The reporter first talked with the young girl in blue at the desk on the left marked "cashier," because the older clerk in white muslin was busy.

The older clerk, who was admittedly in charge, was talking interest with a woman in white. Another woman was waiting. Here is the dialogue:

Young Woman in Blue—"Well, sir, what can we do for you?"

Reporter—"I would like to talk with D. H. Tolman."

"Not in Town."

"Mr. Tolman is not in town. We do his business for him. What will you have?"

"Where can he be found?"

"I cannot say that. What do you wish to see him about?"

"I want to know whether he intends to suspend the money-lending business as a result of the New Jersey court sentence threatening him with imprisonment unless he does."

The girl in blue did not attempt to conceal her surprise. She tapped her pencil pensively and was silent nearly a minute and then she said:

"You had better talk with that lady there. She is in charge."

Clerk in white—"So you're from that treacherous paper, the AMERICAN, are you? Well, let me tell you your paper ought to be punished for printing any such trash. What has the New Jersey court got to do with our business in Boston? Mr. Tolman is doing a legitimate business. He is licensed by the State of Massachusetts."

Mum on Interest.

"Do you mind telling the AMERICAN what rate of interest you charge on small loans?"

"It's none of the AMERICAN'S business what interest we charge."

"Have you got any literature stating your interest rates?"

"We have none and you wouldn't get it if we had."

MRS. FISH SETS UP NEW SOCIAL REIGN OVER 500

NEWPORT, Aug. 2.—Out of the simplest, oldest, youngest idea in the world—the fund of fairy and the stories of Mother Goose, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish fashioned at "Crossways" last night, the most dazzling, the most beautiful and the most significant social spectacle in the history of Newport or Boston.

She founded "the five hundred," and society folk are wondering today if she has not established a new dynasty of social rule. She declared a truce against the grim battles of sex and suffrage. She was hostess to Mrs. John Astor on the latter's first return to the merriments of fashion.

In a quarter of a century there has been no gathering of the merry and mighty to equal her Mother Goose ball.

Jewels estimated to be worth $12,000,000 were worn by the guests and a guard of police and private detectives such as has never attended a social event in Newport before was arrayed. Society people are distinctly alarmed by the recent robberies at Narragansett Pier.

Other interesting statistics are that the costumes cost $50,000, the detectives $10,000 and the supper $5,000.

Herself, the "Queen of the Fairies," simply but scintillatingly gowned, she guided a galaxy of the most noted women in America in the most exquisite of costumes—of childish fancy.

Perhaps the real old Mother Goose never expected "Little Bo-Peep" to wear diamonds, or any of her fairy folk to be clad in sheer silver and gold, but she would have liked them had she been there last night.

If Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden and Miss Edythe Deacon as "the little boys blue" were silken knickerbockers, they were yet the daintiest "boys" in all the throng.

From the tips of their patent leather shoes to the tops of their blonde wigs, they were exquisite. And for more than an hour after their appearance no one knew who they were.

Mrs. Robert Goelet and Mrs. Carter were the others whose fairy dress won the greatest attention, the latter a symphony in glittering silver, with wings and an electric wand.

Bryan Says He Will Resume Lectures

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Secretary Bryan today announced that he probably would leave Washington tonight to resume his Chautauqua lecture tour, which was interrupted last week by Ambassador Wilson's visit to Washington.

MRS. FISH'S BALL GIVEN AS PROTEST AGAINST SUFFRAGE

NEWPORT, Aug. 2.—Mrs. Fish said to the AMERICAN correspondent today: "I have been tired for months of the continual and ceaseless cry of sex and suffrage. Votes for women and the problems of sex have been the growing topic, it seems, of all men and women. I am tired of both. I am tired of women wanting to acquire something they do not need and of giving up the things for which they were created.

"The day after reading of some of the atrocities committed by the militant suffragettes I picked up Mother Goose's melodies and oh, they seemed so refreshing and fine after all this sex and suffrage twaddle. It occurred to me that Mother Goose was someone very much to be revered in this day of woman's changing standards. "Mother Goose was a real woman, and what's more she was a real mother with the love of children before anything else, as it should be.

"Suffragettes—I detest them and my ball is given as a protest to the women who want the ballot instead of the things she was created for."

PRINCE and PRINCESS SOLOWSKI, who are fleeing laundress who says she was Prince's fiancee.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—Prince Stanislaus Solowski of Austria and his bride, who was the wealthy Miss Marie Louise Freese, are engaged in a game of hide and seek to outwit Mrs. Clara Meicher, a Vienna laundress, who is in pursuit of them. The Viennese declares she was the fiancee of the Prince and that he recently told her to come here.

Last Monday the Prince and Miss Freese, who is the daughter of a Los Angeles millionaire, were married hastily, almost secretly. Plans for a brilliant church wedding were changed on brief notice.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple vanished and the only information concerning them given out by Mr. Freese is that, "They are not in this country." It is believed here that they are in Boston or New York or have just sailed from there.

Mrs. Meicher appealed to United States immigration inspectors, and they began an investigation of her story. Inspector Connell declined to comment on the case further then to say it had been submitted to him for inquiry under the Federal law preventing the importation of women.

'Barnet of London' Is Held in $1,000

Man Who Tried to Steal from Bigelow, Kennard Company.

Arthur J. David—alias "Hon. B. Barnet of London"—was held in $1,000 today till next Thursday after pleading guilty to attempting to steal $580 worth of jewelry from the Bigelow, Kennard Company.

He was arrested at the Touraine yesterday. Special Officer John McCarthy testified that David told him he planned to "take a chance," get the messenger who brought the jewelry into his room at the Touraine, then knock him down, snatch the jewels and run.

David pleaded for leniency, saying his parents in London would be heartbroken if they knew of the case, and Judge Murray said he would investigate.

North Shore Jury Acquits the Tango

MAGNOLIA, Aug. 2.—Magnolia society has not only stamped the turkey trot and the tango with its approval, but is hastening to learn the steps, following the demonstration by two professional dancers from New York who appeared before an informal jury in the ball room of a Summer hotel here.

More than 400 of the Summer colony were seated about tables. For the benefit of the uninitiated the experts from Gotham proceeded to display their wiles and soon many couples were swaying to the strains of the orchestra. Not a reproving word was heard.

Among the Boston people who occupied tables were Mrs. Boylston A. Beal, Mrs. Albert I. Crowl, Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Anderson, Quincy A. Shaw, Mrs. Charles Potter, Victor Kennard, Mrs. J. W. Lucas and Mrs. Randolph Tucker.

Huntington Avenue 'Great White Way'

Boston has its first Great White Way. Paid for by the business men on Huntington avenue, brilliant electric lights have transformed that street from one of the darkest of the city into the brightest.

The signal for turning on the lights for the first time was given by Mayor Fitzgerald, following which a parade of business men in automobiles took place the length of the avenue.

Mayor Fitzgerald, in his speech, complimented the citizens of the district on their public spirit.

Charlestown Car Change.

Beginning at midnight tonight the Boston Elevated Railway Company will divert all Charlestown bridge cars, both ways, via Warren avenue bridge. This is due to track work at Kenney square, North Washington and Causeway streets.

DRINK HABIT

I averaged drinking about 20 glasses of whisky daily. Also considerable beer, gin and ale.

Free Book

I want to send you my interesting illustrated book. It is not a temperance lecture, but it describes thrilling facts and tells how, after drinking steadily and heavily for 15 years, I was quickly, easily and completely freed from the craving for intoxicating drinks. It is a book that has brought joy into many homes. It shows a true, inexpensive way of saving drinkers.

Mothers, Wives, Sisters,

this book is for you. I want you to get it as soon as possible and receive the benefit of what it tells you. It is called "Confessions of a Former Alcohol Slave." Not only does it explain how my life was saved from the downward path and ruin, but it shows how you may rescue a son, husband, brother, sister or other loved one from the curse of strong drink. Write to me—E. J. Woods, 534 Sixth Ave., New York City, and get the book; it will come in plain wrapper, no advertising on the outside.

Drinkers Secretly Saved

My free book tells how drinkers are being secretly saved, without their knowledge, if they are so far under the influence of Demon Alcohol that they do not want to get rid of the habit. Also shows how the drinker who wants to quit can be freed of the craving within a few days, and how the health, brain power, etc., will wonderfully improve. Keep this adv. and show it to others; also, when writing, please send me the names and full addresses of any others who might like to receive copies of the book. Address:

Long Sails to Ask Grand Trunk Here

Bears Letter to Directors in London from Realty Men.

Henry C. Long, who for many years has been interested in the development of the port of Boston, sails today for London as a representative of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange to urge the directors of the Grand Trunk Railway to extend their system to Boston.

Mr. Long will also study the docks of London, Manchester and Liverpool.

He bears a letter to the Grand Trunk directors, which says in part:

"The exchange does not look with favor on any compromise whatsoever with the great transportation monopoly which has gradually secured control of the railway situation in New England. Independent and competitive lines are necessary for the welfare of New England. At the present time there is no real competition with regard to transportation between New England and the great West and Northwest."

DISCOVERED CURE FOR ASTHMA AND HAY FEVER

A Kansas Chemist Discovered a Simple Home Remedy for Asthma and Hay Fever and Makes a Generous Offer.

Mr. D. J. Lane, a chemist, located at 827 Lane Bldg., St. Mons, Kas., has discovered a simple home remedy for asthma and hay fever. To test it he sent some to people who had been suffering from asthma and hay fever for many years, and to their delight they state they were easily cured. Being now sure of the merits of his discovery, and has so much confidence in its ability to cure that he will send a $1 bottle by express to any one who will write for it. His offer is that he is to be paid for it if it cures. The one taking it is to be the judge and report its effect within ten days after using the remedy. If you suffer from asthma or hay fever write for a bottle at once. Send no money. Your name and address on a postal card will do.

TRAPPED, SAYS IRISH LASS, TO WORK IN HUB

Declaring she and ten other girls were hired in Belfast, Ireland, to come to this country and work for the Boston Twine and Thread Company and promised all sorts of luxuries, Miss Mary Jane Rooney, an Irish lass of seventeen, graphically describes how she was almost driven to desperation by want after being discharged for "talking too much" to her shopmates. She is temporarily lodging with a family in Jamaica Plain and wants in return to Ireland.

Miss Rooney had but 5 cents and wore an old skirt and weather-worn red sweater when the AMERICAN reporter spoke to her. She said that was all she had in the world.

The records of the immigration office show that Miss Rooney was destined to the Linen Thread Company by agreement. The Secretary of Commerce during the Taft administration, it is claimed, gave his consent for the landing of the aliens girls in this country.

Here is Miss Rooney's story:

"Before October I saw an advertisement in the Belfast Weekly Telegraph, announcing that the Boston Twine and Thread Company wanted girl spinners to work in their factory. I showed the advertisement to my sister, and we wrote a letter applying for the position, as did several other young friends of mine.

"We listened to the story of the agent of how we would be treated the same way. He said we would get $8 a week. We all accepted the positions.

"When we arrived in East Boston last November we were not allowed to land for three days. The immigration officials held us up. The Boston agent of the Boston Twine and Thread Company came after us, but we could not land until he showed some papers.

"Finally, we were taken to Newark, N. J. A woman took me and another girl to live with her. I had to give $3.50 out of the $10 given me when I started for a week's board and lodging.

"The work at the Newark factory was too hard for me, and I was transferred to the Jamaica Plain factory. I worked here up to several days ago, when I was told my services were no longer required.

"The boasted luxuries that were pointed out to me as an incentive to get me and the other girls to come here tricked and trapped me. Ireland is a better place than an American factory any day."

U. S. Gunboat Off for Venezuela

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The U. S. gunboat Des Moines has been ordered to LaGuayra, the nearest point to Caracas, Venezuela, to protect American interests in that country which are jeopardized by the invasion of former President Cipriano Castro and the uprising of his followers. The Des Moines will sail from Brunswick, Ga., Monday, under forced draught.

The State Department today took measures to locate General Castro in order to deport the revolutionist and to put an immediate end to the troubles which started when Castro landed four days ago.

Wilson Withdraws Patterson's Name

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—President Wilson today withdrew the nomination of Adam E. Patterson, negro, of Oklahoma, to be register of the treasury, Patterson having declined the appointment. The name of Gade E. Parker, of Oklahoma, for the office was sent to the Senate by the President.

RECEIVER IS NAMED FOR WALPOLE TIRE

The Walpole Tire and Rubber Company of Walpole was today put in the hands of receiver by Judge Dodge of the United States District Court.

Robert C. Fischer of Walpole is receiver and a $100,000 bond is required of him.

The proceedings were instituted by Rensselaer Curtis of Franklinville, N. Y., and in his bill of complaint he sets forth that the company is fully solvent. Its assets are estimated at $4,126,635, and its liabilities as $1,353,350.

Curtis acts as receiver of the Atlantic National Bank of Providence. It is understood that this Walpole receivership is one of a number following the failure of the G. A. Alden Crude Rubber Company a few weeks ago.

Pope in Good Health.

ROME, Aug. 2.—A body of thirty American pilgrims headed by Mgr. J. H. Tihen, bishop of Lincoln, Neb., found the Pope in the best of health. The pontiff's daily outings in the Vatican gardens are proving most advantageous to him.

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished in From One to Five Days at Home.

The Elders Sanitarium, located at 685 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the deadly effect of the tobacco habit, and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Men who have used tobacco for more than fifty years have tried this method, and say it is entirely successful, and, in addition to banishing the desire for tobacco, has improved their health wonderfully. This method banishes the desire for tobacco, no matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

As this book is being distributed free, anyone wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

CARDENIO F. KING TELLS OF PRISON WORSHP UNDER ARMED GUARDS

Charlestown State Prison officers chew tobacco or gum while guarding prisoners at Sunday service, according to the vivid story of "Secrets of Prison Life," by the late Cardenio F. King, the Boston financial operator. In today's final chapter of this remarkable narrative Mr. King describes worship under armed guards. He concludes his narrative with the sad fate of "Old Babbat" and "Sir William."

CHAPTER V.

Copyright, 1913, by Claude King.

"Jesus Is Calling Today."

CHARLESTOWN STATE PRISON, Jan. 17, 1909.—It's quite a climb to the auditorium over the guard room where chapel services are held. It's up six flights of stone and iron stairs. Two services are held every Sunday morning—mass for Catholics at 8:30 and general Protestant services at 10:30. Prisoners are required under the rules to attend one or the other, and may attend both if they so desire. I decided to take in the general services on my first Sunday in this still to me new and strange world.

The division in which I was toodling along being one of the last, services were under way when I arrived. The gray-suited congregation was singing. The gray-suited orchestra of twenty-five pieces, seated upon a platform in front, was playing. The big platform which is used as a pulpit has upon it also seats for visitors and the orchestra. It presented a rather unique spectacle as I entered the room and sat down upon the bench to which I had been directed by a uniformed officer. The chaplain was seated upon the platform, legs crossed and arms folded. His expression was stern, and I thought half-scowling. To his left sat the "little man with the florid complexion," the deputy warden, neatly attired and with his hair faultlessly brushed. He watched the assembling of his charges with an interested but not unkindly expression. My attention was at once attracted to the big orchestra, and the tall, gaunt and haggard figure of an old man standing in front, drawing with his lifeless hands and expressionless face the bow of an immense bass violin. He seemed entirely oblivious to his surroundings and yet the heavy bass notes rung out in perfect harmony. "Poor old man!" I thought, "you've been here so long and played that tune so many times that you could doubtless play it in your sleep!"

The soft, mellow voice of a young man at my side could be heard clear and distinct. I violated a rule by turning my head to look at him. He was evidently a newcomer, for the glow of health was still upon his cheeks and prison pallor had not as yet laid hold upon him. I listened to the words of the song:

Jesus is calling the weary to rest—
Calling today, calling today;
Bring Him thy burden and thou shalt be blest:
He will not turn thee away.

Calling today, calling today,
Jesus is calling, is tenderly calling today.

Jesus is pleading, oh, list to His voice—
Hear Him today, hear Him today;
They who believe on this name shall rejoice;
Quickly arise and away.

Calling today, calling today,
Jesus is calling, is tenderly calling today.

The words of the song and the intermingling of the melody of nearly 700 gray-suited prisoners, led by the big prison orchestra, caused a deep spiritual feeling to well up within me, and I was actually beginning to believe myself in a sacred place of worship, when my eyes wandered about the room and I saw nearly a score of officers in uniform seated upon elevated chairs about the walls. They were there to see that the prisoners worshiped God in exact accordance with the statutes and the rules of the prison, and I did not have to be told that they were armed with death-dealing instruments. The sight of these blue-coated officers lining the wall, many of whom were nonchalantly chewing tobacco or gum, and all totally disinterested in the services from a devotional point of view, quickly took away the spiritual aspect of the scene and changed it to one only of entertainment. From now on I found interest only in studying the unusual picture. I was impressed by the chaplain's prayer because of its great length and the multitudinous list of things asked for. His sermon was delivered without feeling and was brief. It was received in a perfectly indifferent manner so far as I could judge. Then, again, led by the orchestra, the congregation stood up and made the roof and steel-barred windows fairly rattle with:

The Lord our Rock, in Him we hide,
A shelter in the time of storm;
Secure whatever ill betide,
A shelter in the time of storm.

CHORUS:

Oh, Jesus is a Rock in a weary land,
A weary land, a weary land,
Oh, Jesus is a Rock in a weary land,
A shelter in the time of storm.

The raging storm may round us beat,
A shelter in the time of storm;
We'll never leave our safe retreat,
A shelter in the time of storm.

O Rock divine, O Refuge dear,
Be Thou our help forever near,
A shelter in the time of storm.

After the singing we remained standing while the chaplain pronounced a perfunctory benediction. Then the orchestra struck up a lively quick-step and the gray-suited congregation began to file out on either side of the room and wind down the stairs, each division of twenty or thirty being accompanied by an officer. We passed the kitchen "slide" and gathered in our allowance for dinner, consisting of baked fish, mashed potatoes and bread. It was 11:30 when I returned to the close confines of my cell, and the door was locked, to be opened no more until 7 o'clock tomorrow morning.

After eating my dinner and reading for a while I grew very restless and had to fight hard to keep from being enveloped in a fit of melancholia. I paced back and forth in my cagelike cell—back and forth, back and forth. The chapel scene spread out before me and again I saw the tall, gaunt figure of the old man mechanically drawing the big bow over the strings of the immense bass violin. Unconsciously I began to whistle as I paced back and forth, and as I whistled my soul breathed the words of the song:

Jesus is calling the weary to rest—
Calling today, calling today;
Bring Him thy burden and thou shalt be blest,
He will not turn thee away.

My eyes fixed upon the barren, white-washed walls, followed the movements of the bow in the lifeless hand of the old man, and as he played I whistled on:

Calling today, calling today
Jesus is calling, is tenderly calling today.

An officer appeared at my barred door and informed me that I must "cut out whistling and walking." "It's against the rules," he said. I told him that I would do exactly as he ordered, and explained that the whistling was unconscious, for I was not even a poor whistler. I sat down and tried to read, but the lines would blur and run together. I tried to write, but my mind seemed moving in four different directions at once, and so I had to give it up.

The chapel scene once more appeared, and I was startled to find myself softly humming:

Oh, Jesus is a Rock in a weary land,
A weary land, a weary land;
Oh, Jesus is a Rock in a weary land,
A shelter in the time of storm.

I knew it would not do and determined to keep the admonition of the officer in mind. Just when I thought I was obeying all the rules, for surely I was neither whistling nor pacing the floor, the officer again appeared and pointed out that I was drumming with my fingers on the table, and as it was calculated to disturb other prisoners, I would have to "cut it out and keep quiet."

I turned to musing on the old bass violinist, and just then the wing "trusty," or "runner," as he is called, came to leave me a magazine, loaned by a friendly neighbor.

"Tell me," I said to him, "something about the old fellow who plays the big bass fiddle in the orchestra."

"Sure," he answered, "that's Babbot, poor old devil, been here about twenty-eight years; was convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence, sentenced to hang, but was commuted to life imprisonment. Always says he's innocent. But, say! he can make that bass fiddle talk all right, all right. He keeps it in his cell over in Cherry Hill and it's his pal—all the pal he's got, for he is gettin' old and he don't go about much. Funny about Babbot and his big fiddle. It's so big that he can't lug it up the stairs to chapel, for it's all he can do to get up his own self, he's that feeble; so they has a young fellow carry it up for him, while Babbot tugs along behind. It's the same coming down. Long years ago Babbot names the big fiddle 'Sir William.' He speaks of it real affectionate like, and I guess if it should be taken away from him he wouldn't last a great while. Him and Sir William sure is great pals."

Poor old Babbot! I wonder why his long-drawn features—his bloodless, leathery hands—made such a deep impression upon me? Even before being told, I was sure he had been here a long time and I felt that for a generation, perhaps, his life had been filled with inexpressible sadness. Now comes the story in a nutshell: Convicted because he could not prove that innocence, which for twenty-eight years as a convict he has steadfastly maintained!

Twenty-eight years! No wonder now that look of sadness! If Sir William could only talk he could tell us whether or not the old man is guilty of the crime charged to his account. For with that old fiddle as his only pal he has confessed all to it—he has denied his guilt or acknowledged it. And it may be that he is guiltless. And if he is—all the gold of the Commonwealth could not pay the bill it owes him. For so great a wrong there could be no compensation. Circumstantial evidence has claimed many an innocent victim, and perhaps the old man feels that in escaping the chair, after he had been sentenced to death he was really lucky. Was he? No hope now is his—and what has he extracted out of life? Has his companionship with Sir William been worth the price? Better the grave and the judgment bar of God than a life sentence within stone walls and behind barred doors!

Poor old comrade! I'm afraid the memory of your protruding cheek bone, the slight haunch to your back and the deathlike pallor of your face—your tall, angular figure—those eyes that look away off yonder and see no hope, will haunt me for many a day. Twenty-eight years to see there is no use—and yet you declare your innocence! May the bright sun of freedom shine along your path before the passing of many more weary years! For even if guilty as charged, I am sure after seeing you today that you've suffered long, and far too long. Many times over you've paid the price! Yours has been a moral death—"and," says the sneering cynic, "the wages of sin is death"—but how about it when there was no sin—when the irony of Fate met with untoward circumstance and plucked a man from among those he loved; banded him a number for his identity—threw him into prison for his natural lifetime, and left him there protesting his innocence to an old fiddle to which he gave his heart!

27 NATIONS TO TAKE PART IN PANAMA FAIR

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The State Department was confident today that the majority of the fourteen nations yet to be heard from on the Panama Exposition will accept the invitation of the United States to participate in the great enterprise.

Invitations were sent to forty-nine. No less than twenty-seven have accepted and are making preparations to be represented.

Eight have declined outright, for political, financial or other reasons. England, for instance, is credited with resentment at the Panama Canal differences, though the British public, according to advices from London, is most favorable to participation. Russia, another decliner, is believed to be piqued at the abrogation and passport troubles. Bulgaria, Servia and Turkey have plenty of business to attend to at home now. Egypt, Morocco and Siam are lesser nations which will not be represented.

Fourteen nations are to be heard from. Austria is merely waiting to get a report from a committee of lawmakers and business men now touring the United States and Canada. Italy has not yet accepted, but the government's appropriation of $100,000 for the exposition is indication enough.

The remaining twelve in the "undecided" list are Abyssinia, Belgium, Colombia, Germany, Greece, Montenegro, Paraguay, Persia, Roumania, Spain, Switzerland and Venezuela.

A curious feature is the recorded acceptance of Canada, although Great Britain has declined. The countries which have accepted are Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Guatemala, Hayti, Honduras, Japan, Liberia, Mexico, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Norway, Panama, Peru, Portugal, Salvador, Sweden and Uruguay.

Gov. Foss Admits He Wants Fourth Term

Politicians Discussing His Statement to Strike Leaders.

Politicians today discussed with interest the first definite announcement, direct from Governor Foss himself, that he will seek "a fourth piece of pie." The Governor made the announcement at a conference at the State House with the State Board of Arbitration and a committee of the strikers from his Hyde Park plants.

In a prepared statement he charged the strike was prompted by politics; that labor leaders had threatened to speak against him on the stump in the coming campaign.

Counsel for the strikers, William J. Patron, reminded the Governor he had not before definitely announced his candidacy.

For several moments Governor Foss gazed at the attorney and then said slowly:

"O, that has always been conceded; that I was to be a candidate."

Wears a Beauty Spot on His Cheek

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 2.—Folks who tangoed at the Casino quit in amazement when there came on the floor a young man whose shoes, stockings, trousers, coat, shirt, scarf, collar and hat were all of white. On his left cheek he wore a beauty spot, a tiny heart-shaped bit of black court plaster. The astonishing stranger came from Watch Hill.

Carrel Makes Dead Cat's Heart Beat

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—How he kept the heart of a cat alive through transfusion for thirteen hours and a quarter after the animal from which it had been separated was dead, is told by Dr. Alexis Carrel in the current Journal of Experimental Medicine, official magazine of the Rockefeller Institute.

3 Newport Belles Swim Mile on Bet

NEWPORT, Aug. 2.—Three debutantes —the Misses Mimi Scott, Elsie Stevens and Rose Dolan—swam from Bailey's Beach to Hazards, almost a mile, in a rough sea on a wager made by Miss Scott that she could make the distance without effort. The other girls followed her.

Accuses Malden Fireman.

Charges have been preferred against Foreman Thomas F. Powell of Chemical 8 of Malden, by Daniel D. Downey of No. 60 Russell street, and a hearing will be given by Fire Commissioner Walter W. Campbell next week. Downey says Powell made an insulting remark to his daughter Mary.

Profane Parrot Defies Police Chief

Pittsburgh Officer Can Find No Law to Stop It.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 2.—Thomas A. McQuaid, superintendent of police of Pittsburgh, was complained to by neighbors, who objected to the noise of a crowing rooster and a swearing parrot, owned by Mrs. John Dillon.

McQuaid visited the woman and was taken to the parrot's cage.

When McQuaid poked his finger at the parrot it shrilled:

"Who in the h—— are you?"

At police headquarters later the superintendent said:

"There is no ordinance that says a parrot must stop swearing, or provides punishment if it does. I guess we will have to let it keep on swearing."

Man Saves Wife In Swampscott Fire

Then Braves Flames to Aid Son Rescue Girl Guest.

Trapped by flames on the second story of their home at No. 148 Elmwood avenue, Swampscott, when the house was ageked by fire early today, Captain William Perry and his wife escaped death only by crawling down the blazing stairway on their hands and knees. Finally Perry had to drag the unconscious form of his wife from the burning building.

Perry then returned to assist his son Harrison in the rescue of Miss Margery Lee, a guest. The loss is placed at $2,500. It is thought the fire started in the basement, but its origin has not yet been determined.

Hawthorne Depicts Ideal Prison Life

Convict-Poet Writes Allegory of Sumptuous Imprisonment.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 2.—In an article appearing in "Good Words," the Atlanta federal prison magazine, Julian Hawthorne, the prison poet, Convict No. 4475, depicts prison life as he thinks it ought to be. This article is a strange allegory, occurring between four men in a prison of the future.

His four characters are depicted in the dining hall of the prison after a sumptuous dinner, listening to a band playing Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

"The hall is sumptuously furnished with immense jars scattered about, holding orange trees covered with blossoms and rose trees.

Miss Thomas in Shore Romance

British Colonel Hastens From India to Join Heiress.

Boston and North Shore society friends of Miss Margaret Thomas, daughter of Washington B. Thomas, the multi-millionaire sugar magnate, are looking for an announcement of her engagement to Colonel Robert S. Scott of the British Royal Engineers.

Scott, who met Miss Thomas in India, is a visitor at Pride's Crossing, where the two are constant companions in golf, polo and bathing and golfing.

Miss Thomas gave up society and accompanied her father, who was ill, on a trip abroad last Fall. In India she was stricken with smallpox, and Colonel Scott was marked in his solicitude for the fair visitor.

Lodge Home to Talk on Nahant School

Leaves Washington to Preside Over Town Meeting.

Senator Lodge will preside as moderator over the Nahant town meeting tonight, leaving Federal affairs to take up the question of whether or not the town shall build a new schoolhouse at a cost of $25,000

The schoolhouse question has aroused keen partisanship in Nahant. Many of the townspeople believe that a new roof should be put on the old house, instead of going to the expense of erecting a new building. It was such a momentous question that Senator Lodge had no hesitation about leaving Washington, while he made a flying trip to Massachusetts, to oblige his townspeople.

New Haven Plans to Spend $2,300,000

Seventeen Crossings, Several Near Boston, to Be Soon Abolished.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Aug. 2.—Announcement is made by the New Haven road that the abolition of sixteen highway crossings and one railroad crossing is planned, the cost to be $2,300,000. In Rhode Island the company is eliminating five crossings at Pawtucket and Central Falls, two at Stamford and two at Otisville.

Plans are also under way for abolishing all grade crossings between Boston and Providence, and at Braintree, Quincy and Taunton, Mass.

RAY COLLINS IS OUT OF THE GAME WITH LAME ARM

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

STALLINGS' SYSTEM IS SHOWING RESULTS AGAINST CARDINALS

SOX END SERIES WITH NAPS IN A DOUBLE-HEADER

The Naps wind up their work at the Fenway Park today with the Red Sox. This harum-day till was caused by the postponement of Wednesday's game by rain.

Ray Collins, the Red Sox's only smooth-running pitcher during the last two weeks, has joined Joe Wood in the hospital. With this cheering word to discourage them the Red Sox prepared for a desperate effort against the Naps today.

Here's the Red Sox line-up of cripples: Heinie Wagner, sore hand.
Tris Speaker, injured arm.
Larry Gardner, bad ankle.
Joe Wood, broken thumb.
Ray Collins, strained arm.

And the Naps, straining in pursuit of the dropping Athletics, will take all they can get.

This series has been a rather prosperous one for the Naps. They have taken three games played, and unless the pitching and infielding of the Red Sox improve this afternoon, the Naps may have another opportunity to better their average.

There is no denying the fact, however, but that the Naps are playing real baseball. Their work in this series is proof enough, and this, despite the fact that neither Cy Falkenberg nor Vean Gregg, their two star pitchers, is in condition to pitch. Birmingham, though, has sufficient pitching material on hand, and there is no telling what the Naps would do if Falkenberg and Gregg were pitching now as they did at the start of the season.

Naps Coming Along.

At that, the Naps are slowly but surely closing in on the leading Mackmen, who, by the way, are not having things all their own way nowadays. The Cleveland leaders have cut down considerable space between themselves and the Athletics during the present encounters with the Red Sox, while the Athletics were meeting several setbacks at the hands of the Browns, and now but seven games separates the two teams.

The Red Sox, on the other hand, are in pretty bad shape, indeed. Wagner, the keystone of the infield, is out of the game with blood poisoning in his right hand. Heinie has done brilliant fielding since the team has returned home and his services will be sadly missed. Janvrin, who has taken Wagner's place in the lineup, was playing second base right along and it will take him some few games to get accustomed to his new territory.

Right on top of Wagner's injury comes the news that Ray Collins has a lame arm. It is not known how long Ray will be out of the game and, while it may only be temporary, he will prove a hard loss to the Sox, as his work was the backbone of the pretty-well-balanced pitching staff. Ray was carded to pitch yesterday, but, in warming up before the game, his arm caused him considerable trouble and Carrigan would take no chances in sending him in.

Youngsters Pitch Today.

Foster and Leonard will pitch today. The latter worked for three innings yesterday and was forced to retire when his curves were being touched up too freely. However, with the present condition of the pitching staff, "Dutch" will probably be forced right back at the Naps. Foster should be in good shape to take his turn. He only worked a part of the inning against the Naps in the first double-header. Willie Mitchell and Kahler look like the Nap pitching selections.

Steve Yerkes is back at second base. It can easily be seen that the long layoff did Steve's fielding no good. Yesterday his work was very slow.

The return of Ray Chapman to the infield has greatly added the Naps, judging by his work in this series. Ray is probably the best-rounded player in the inner works, and besides being a star fielder and a good batter, his continual line of chatter serves to bolster up his pitcher and also encourage the men playing about him.

National Regatta Has 102 Entries

According to Councilor Earnest E. Smith, 102 entries have been received for the national regatta on the Charles River next Friday and Saturday afternoons. The first of the visiting oarsmen are expected to arrive here tomorrow or Monday. The Lynn Yacht Club authorities are making preparations for the oarsmen who will arrive on Monday.

Oarsmen from the Riverside Union B. C. and St. Alphonsus B. C., were on the river limbering up last night.

Red Sox Purchase St. Paul Pitcher

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 2.—Elmer Rieger, sold by St. Paul to the Boston Americans, came to St. Paul from the St. Louis Nationals in 1911, and despite lack of condition, split even in his sixteen games that year. In 1912, after a long illness, he cut loose for ten straight wins and was the star of the team. This year he has been the team's leading pitcher, winning twelve of the eighteen games he has pitched.

Rieger is a delicate looking, slender fellow, extremely quiet and modest and there is nothing spectacular in his pitching. He has exceptional control, good curves and a tremendous fast ball, which he uses occasionally.

His success has been due rather to his head than to his arm.

In his three seasons here he has won thirty-nine games and lost twenty-three, and his net batting average is .421.

Tennis Victors on Way Home with Cup

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—George T. Adee of the national rowing committee said that Robert D. Wrenn, president of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, was aboard the Imperator with the Davis international challenge cup, and would arrive in this city either next Tuesday or Wednesday. It had not been expected that Wrenn would return until the middle of the month.

It is understood that McLoughlin, Hackett, Williams and Johnson are with Wrenn. The Crescent Athletic Club is planning to meet the Imperator as the steamer enters port and lead the victorious team at the Crescent dock or the water front of the famous lawn tennis grounds at Bay Ridge.

Vermont Match May End Today

RUTLAND, Vt., Aug. 2.—Today comes the championship match, thirty-six holes, in the State golf tourney at the Rutland Country Club.

In the second round of match play P. H. Jennings, Bennington, beat H. Leslie, Montpelier, by 4 and 3; F. Woodruff, Dorset, beat J. Stanton, Rutland, 2 and 1, and E. Holt, Burlington, beat J. A. Merrill, Rutland, by 2 and 1. E. H. Pond and G. F. Morse of Rutland were tied at the eighteenth hole, Morse winning at the twentieth.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 2.—That a good ball club, one which is trying, will continue to battle until a win, even without its manager, is being demonstrated by the Boston Pilgrims here.

George Stallings has been given credit for developing the Pilgrims and hauling them out of last place and his system now is bringing results.

The Pilgrims, minus Stallings, are beating the Cardinals here, because they are playing real baseball. When the hit and run falls, they try something else and if they miss on the sacrifice they hit and run to put through, and with that the Pilgrims are fielding brilliantly, and it is now possible that they are far ahead of the Cardinals and Reds.

Stallings made the proper changes when he secured promising youngsters and the difference is shown in his team and the Cards. Huggins is commanding a set of supposed stars who are not trying and that's why they are last.

"Soldier" Hess has become a fence buster, joining Maranville and Lord as home-run wallopers. Hess' home run yesterday was one of the longest of the season and cleared the right field wall, going out of the park. The only other player to duplicate this is "Chief" Wilson of the Pirates, who put the ball over the same spot last year.

With the Superbas losing again the Pilgrims now are only two and a half games, or twenty-six points, behind fifth place.

"Lefty" Tyler or Dick Rudolph will get the call to take the last game from the Cardinals today.

If the Pilgrims succeed and Brooklyn loses again, then the Hubtowmites will have a good chance to come home fifth.

Young Smith is doing a good job at third base and Charley McDonald and his .357 batting is not being missed. Smith is a fast fielder and can cover plenty of ground too. Then he is handy at any infield position.

The Pilgrims cracked Phenom Dusk all the way yesterday. He is the youngster who in fourteen innings allowed the Giants but one run and five hits.

Mike Glover Matched.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Mike Glover, the clever Boston welterweight, will meet Paddy Sullivan, a local boxer, in a ten-round bout at the Atlantic A. A., Rockaway, next Tuesday.

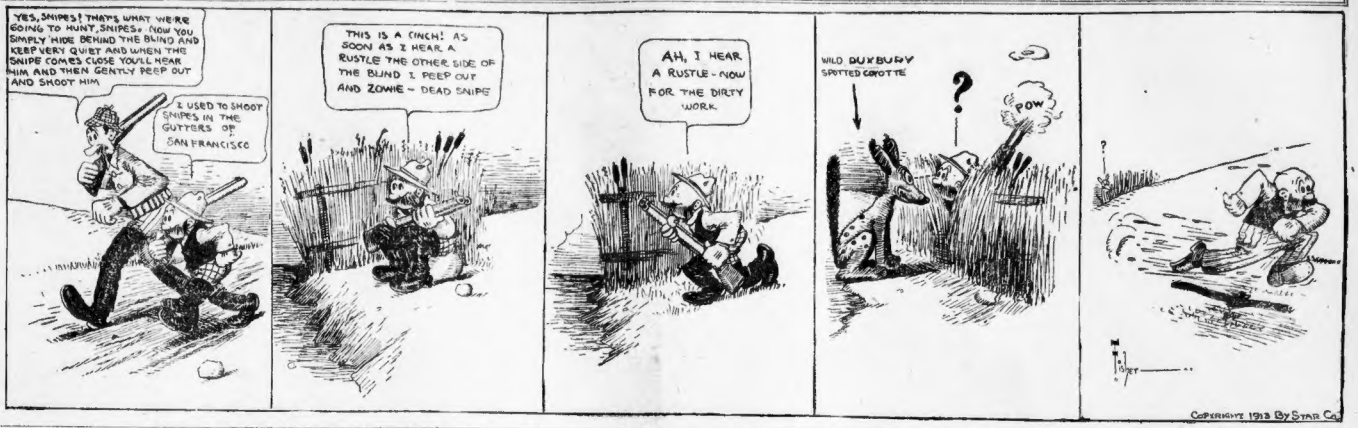
I. A. A. U.-B. A. A. RELAY TO FEATURE EVENTS AT SCOTCH PICNIC

The Fact There Are No Coyotes in Duxbury Makes No Difference

By "Bud" Fisher



Pick of Athletes in Scotch Games Today

Boston New York Relay Race the Big Feature of Caledonian Grove Events

Many star athletes of the East competed in the annual games held in connection with the Scotch picnic at Caledonian Grove this afternoon. This is the biggest outdoor meet around Boston and thousands of lovers of track athletics attended.

Both amateur and professional events were carded.

The feature events of the day were the 440-yard run and the intercolb relay race between the B. A. A. and the Irish-American A. C. of New York. These events held the centre of interest and many runners were considered the favorites.

In the 440-yard event Mel Sheppard, the hero of two Olympic meets, was conceded two yards' handicap by Tom Halpin, the B. A. A. runner. This is the first time in his running career that Sheppard had been allotted a mark, and this went to make the race all the more close.

Halpin Running Well.

Halpin is running in wonderful form at present, and was confident that he could overcome the two yards.

P. Pepin, Rosenberger, Kiviat and Sheppard was the team picked to trim the B. A. A. quartet, and this race will be worth going miles to witness.

The New Yorkers recently established a new world's mark for he 1,200-yards relay, and the B. A. A. will be pushed to the limit in order to win.

A good field started in the 100-yard run. Tom Halpin, the B. A. A. man, ran from scratch in this event and was a likely winner. Although Halpin is a quarter-miler, he has won several 100-yard dashes this season and was one of the favorites this afternoon.

Cracks in Three Mile.

The three-mile run brought together a star field. Jimmy Hennigan, J. Ballad, A. K. Sturgis, Tom Lilly and Oscar Hedlund are all turning in good times for the distance, and the race was one of the best seen in years.

Jimmy Powers of the B. A. A. ruled the top heavy favorite in the mile run, but many good runners were entered in the event and the B. A. A. star has to perform at his best. A. T. Marcean and Warner, both of the B. A. A., are star milers. Power starts the race from scratch, his teammates having an allowance of ten yards.

Harrison of the B. A. A. should win the high jump. He is a scratch man, but his performances this season outclass any of his competitors.

Mel Sheppard was put on scratch in the 880. John Burke had an allowance of four yards, and Marcean started from the same line.

Following is a complete list of entries:

Griffin to Meet Armstrong for Title

CHICAGO, Aug. 2.—Clarence Griffin, California's latest tennis marvel, upheld the reputation of his State by qualifying for the Western championship finals through a victory in his hardest match of the tournament over William Blair of Lake Geneva, Wis., 6—2, 7—5, 6—2.

Today in the final round, upon which, through the absence of champion Maurice McLoughlin, depends the title, Griffin will meet Joseph Armstrong of St. Paul, who down Harry Wright of Chicago, 1—6, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3, in the semi-final.

K. of C. Title Game.

The South Boston and Santa Maria Councils of the Knights of Columbus battle today in a game that will decide the championship of the Knights of Columbus league. The game will be played at McNary Park, and will be attended by knights from almost every council in the city.

BATTERIES—

AMATEUR RACE TO BE FEATURE AT BEACH OVAL

It is many years since an amateur was featured in a bicycle race, probably the last one being Marcus Hurley of New York. Tonight an amateur will be the top liner at the Revere Cycle Track. Donald MacDougall of Newark, American and world's champion amateur sprinter.

He will match his speed in two heats against Willie Turville of Revere, who won the greater part of the races at the beach this season. The pair will race for a mile and a half-mile.

Pat Logan, the speedy veteran of the Peninsula District, will be the third man in the twenty-five-mile motor-paced race.

Logan has been one of the features of the present racing season for he was out of the game for three years and on his re-entry started to win and kept up his coin collecting pace. To the fans he is the real "comeback" biker and is especially popular.

While Logan will have a difficult problem to win tonight, he is not a rider to fear a race for he rode in too many six day grinds in New York and he will start expecting to ride his best and trusting to luck that it is good enough to get in the money.

His opponents are the "class" of the motor-paced field, George Wiley and Jimmy Moran. Just where Pat will fit in the ultimate running of the race is problematical, but a duel between the pair of bitter rivals, Wiley and Moran, is assured.

Zeider Released from the Hospital

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Rollie Zeider, the much talked of player who was traded to the New Yorks with Borton for Hal Chase, telegraphed Chance that he had left the hospital in St. Louis, where he has spent two weeks, and was about to take a train for this city. Zeider said that he had been assured by the hospital surgeon who removed a piece of bone from his foot that he would be able to play as well as ever in the course of a week or ten days. But it is believed that Zeider will not be asked to put on a uniform until some time next month—if then.

Zeider recently made the statement to chance that he was troubled with the now famous bunion when the White Sox were training in California last March. Kid Gleason refuted this statement yesterday. He said that Zeider was a member of the second team which he managed and that it wasn't a bunion that troubled the player, but a boil on his back.

"I know what I am talking about," exclaimed Gleason hotly. "For I held Zeider's legs while a doctor removed the boil. He was as fit as a fiddle when we reached Chicago."

Matty Baldwin and His Manager Break

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 2.—Matty Baldwin and his manager are on their way to Boston. Before leaving here Baldwin stated he hoped to return here within a few months and promised to redeem himself in the eyes of the local fans. Murphy had nothing to say about returning to the East, and it is generally understood that fighter and manager will separate when they arrive in the East. The fact that Murphy sent Baldwin into the ring against Cross at catchweights did not please the boxer, and it is to this that he attributes his rather ordinary showing.

Wakefield Miss Catches Ball Game

YORK BEACH, Me., Aug. 2.—Miss McDonald of Wakefield caught for the winning York Beach team against U. S. S. Paducah, and scored ten putouts. Several Greater Boston boys were in the victors' lineup.

CHANCE SAYS HE WILL NOT QUIT AS YANKS' HEAD

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Manager Frank Chance of the New York American League baseball team, denied emphatically the report that he would resign as leader of the Yankees at the close of the present season. Chance was at a loss to explain the rumor, which originated in Los Angeles. He stated that he was perfectly satisfied with the present outlook for the team and the conditions under which he was working.

"I have not the slightest intention of resigning as manager of the New York club," said Chance. "Instead, I am working and planning to put a real pennant contender into the American League next season. It's slow work, to be sure, for I have to go into the bushes for the big league. Unless circumstances over which I have no control arise, and I know of nothing of the sort at present, I shall continue with the New York club until I close my active baseball career.

"I have no apologies to offer for the showing of the club to date. I realized from the start that it would have to be entirely rebuilt in order to prove a winner, and this task, which cannot be accomplished in a week, is the one which is engaging my entire attention at this time. I expect by trade, purchase and draft to gather players who will strengthen weak points on the team, and when I get the combination together we will have a team to be feared. In fact, the boys are already beginning to play a fast game. Zeider will report in a few days, and, with two new players whom I expect in a week or ten days, will almost double the strength of the club.

"My relations with President Farrell are most harmonious, and He support given both the club and myself by followers of baseball is all that could be desired. I am absolutely satisfied with New York as a baseball and home proposition. When I can give the local fans the kind of a team they deserve, my every wish will have been gratified. Until that time, talk of my resigning is out of order."

Baldwin Will Soon Be Back in Boston

Charlestown 'Bearcat" Certain to Make Trouble for New England Lightweights

MATTY BALDWIN is expected to return to Boston within a short while. The Charlestown boy's services are no longer in demand on the Coast, as he did not show to advantage in his bout with Leach Cross. Matty would have acted wisely if he had remained in the East instead of going to the Coast.

The conditions under which Baldwin fought Cross were all in favor of the New York dentist. He was the drawing card on the Coast and as a consequence named almost all of the terms for the match.

Matty is still far from being all in and there are a number of championship contenders whom he is able to defeat. Baldwin is the lightweight champion of New England and Murphy, Joe Eagan and the rest of the local boxers will experience plenty of opposition when Matty is in our midst again.

MATTY HAS GOOD RECORD.

BALDWIN has made a great ring record. He is now twenty-nine years of age and has been fighting since he was a lad of sixteen. In this time he has met and defeated some of the leading lightweights in the world.

The Charlestown boy is a fighter of the old type. He likes to keep busy in the ring and never objected as opponent. Alex McLean, Baldwin's former manager, once told the writer that Matty did not care how much his opponents weighed as long as they could fight. "Baldwin does not know the meaning of the word fear," said McLean.

MURPHY AND EAGAN MEET.

EDDIE MURPHY and Joe Eagan, the two South Boston lightweights, met last night and after a heated argument which lasted three hours no agreement could be reached between them. Only a few minor details remain to be settled, however, and the chances are that the two men will meet at the Atlas A. A. on Tuesday evening, August 19. Eddie Mack, representing Joe Eagan, and Matchmaker McLean of the Atlas club were present at the meeting.

A YOUNG man, who fights under the name of Battling Reddy, claims the bantam-weight championship of the East. Reddy hails from New York and he fought such well known performers as "Young" Kerrigan, "Kid" Williams and Charley Ledoux. When Reddy claimed the Eastern title, he must have carefully forgotten that "Kid" Williams hails from Baltimore, or perhaps the Battler never spent a great deal of his time in studying geography, and is laboring under the impression that Baltimore is a bustling Western city or else the capital of Madagascar.

NO SHOW AT ATLAS A. A.

THERE will not be any boxing show at the Atlas A. A. next Tuesday evening. The majority of the leading ring men are resting during the Summer months and it is very difficult to get good drawing cards. Matchmaker Johnny McGinn is planning to put on several good bouts a week from Tuesday. The main bout will probably be between "Wild cat" Fearns and Frank Loughery.

MANY BOXERS AFTER BROWN.

MICKEY BROWN, the Malden bantamweight, does not have to look far for an opponent. Ever since Brown challenged Jimmy Walsh, a large number of husky youths have announced that they are willing to accommodate Brown. They declare that Mickey is not entitled to a "go" with a ring wizard like Walsh until after he has defeated a few more second and third raters.

Jack Munice, the Charlestown featherweight, would like to get a date with Brown. Munice is a good performer and would make things interesting for the Malden boxer. "K. O." Rogers writes from New York that nothing would please him better than a chance to meet Brown in a ring tussle.

ALBERTS ON WARPATH.

LEO "Splash" Flynn is trying to arrange a match for "Kid" Alberts with some star welterweight. Alberts recently defeated Tony Morinao at the Atlas A. A. Morinao was outclassed by Alberts, but the latter did not show at his best. Flynn is not the least bashful in declaring that Alberts is capable of defeating any man of his weight in the East.

Flynn is also managing "K. O." Sweeney. Sweeney is only a lad of seventeen and has never been defeated. He boxes like "K. O." Brown and has won the majority of his bouts by landing a dream wallop.

Cornell Loses Exeter Miler

EXETER, N. H., Aug. 2.—"Jack" Moakley of Cornell lost a good distance runner when Samuel H. Chester, a graduate from this year's class at Phillips Exeter, decided to go into business instead of taking the course at Cornell, as he first intended. Chester acted as pacemaker to Gregg Dougherty in the mile races last Spring, and was fast developing into a promising man. His home is at Owls Head, Me.

Beauty

Pauline Frederick Tells the Secret of her Great Charm and Dazzling Loveliness

Pauline Frederick's Best Picture

PAULINE FREDERICK in private life is a trimly smart shirt-waist girl, whose delightful sense of humor and simple enthusiasm of manner claim place with picture prettiness in the category of her charms.

Instead of sitting back in lackadaisical loveliness and merely being in the picture, Miss Frederick is ever working and striving for success in her art, for supreme health of the healthy out-of-doors, free-to-every-one-kind, and for the supple slenderness that she and Dame Fashion agree in admiring.

TOO SEVERE

"I like the idea of being just as slender as perfect health will permit—which means make haste slowly' in the motility process. A lot of fresh air and a little of food seem to produce the fewest number of pounds and the most health," said the woman who has been called by Harrison Fisher the prettiest American girl. "Once upon a time, my story goes," I tried to get twenty-five pounds all off at once. I did it in five weeks and almost deprived my heart of the ability to work at the same time. I used to swathe my body in sheets of medicated rubber, and then finish my costume with a few sweaters, and then go on little tramps up the Alps in the neighborhood of Thun—near Lucerne, you know. I was combining too many methods at once. The outdoor air of the mountain country is a wonderful tonic, sane exercise is a reducing factor, and the medicated rubber has a Turkish bath effect in melting off pounds. But one thing at a time in the thinning process—or good red blood and air-pumping lungs will be reduced to mere onlookers in the struggle for existence.

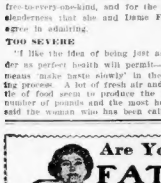
"The simple life in Summer is a wonderful tonic—hair down in braids so it can join you in breathing in clean, pure air, and in breathing out poems of praise for the glory of out-of-doors. Getting away from people and near to Nature will bring you back to the city ready to put your best self into your Winter's work. And if your 'best self' means a self minus ten or twelve pounds, why, exercise sanely, bathe earnestly, and try this diet. For breakfast—orange juice, a whole grapefruit if it, to be sipped and enjoyed. For luncheon—two eggs, boiled or poached, some very dry toast and tea with lemon. For dinner—boiled fish or roasted chicken, salad, any non-starchy vegetable and plenty of stewed fruit, or cold fresh fruit."

I grinned a bit at the thought of gracefully slender, willowy Pauline Frederick's appearing on the scenes as an expert on the gentle art of getting thin—by "getting thin" is not what rounds —keeping your slender lines by definite reasoning from a limousine or office-chair sedentary life and the temptations of the French pastry tray is the secret Pauline Frederick imparts.

"And now for the complexion," went on the scintillating star. "I have two c's that are a trustworthy pair of friends to my skin. Let me introduce you. Cream—not 'cold' cream—but plain cream—'common or garden' cream to ward off the ravages of sunburn and tan from the skin that does not take on a picturesque coppery hue, but that burns a lobster red. Cream and water, and tan from the skin that does not take on a picturesque coppery hue, but that burns a lobster red. Cream and water, and Cream will clear your skin from dust, will heal the blemishes that are trying to establish themselves and will write 'no thoroughfare' for the imperfections that are planning to invite themselves. Cream and castile soap ushered in thoroughly and washed out again. They make cleanliness and completion lovelier."

But doors, a sane diet, cream and castile soap! And lovely Pauline Frederick recommending them. Join me, little sister, for I intend hitching my wagon of desire for beauty to this beautiful star.

LILIAN LAUFERTY.



Are You FAT?

I Was ONCE.

I Reduced MYSELF.

I was Fat, Uncomfortable, Looked Old, Felt Miserable, suffered with Rheumatism, Asthma, Neuralgia. When I walked or talked, I puffed like a Porpoise. I took every advertised medicine I could find. I starved. Sweated. Exercised. Doctored and changed climate, but I gained my disorder, fell like an anvil, and generally retained weight. There was not a single plan or drug that I did not try. Then I got desperate. I began to reduce my weight, and in a very short time I got one to be the happiest woman alive. I was embarrassed to have my friends tell me I was getting Stout, as no one knew it better than myself.

SOMETHING HAD TO BE DONE

I began to study the cause of FAT. When I discovered the cause I found the remedy. The French Method gave me an insight. I improved on that. Removed the objectionable features, added more pleasant ones, and then I tried my plan on myself for a week. It worked like Magic. I could have

at the end of the first week, when the scales told me I had lost ten pounds in my weight. Easy, harmless, Dropless Method. Not a Starvation Scheme. I compare myself to what a normal self is now. I feel fifteen years younger. I look fifteen years younger. My Double Chin has entirely disappeared. I can walk or work now. I can climb a mountain. I have regained my size. I can weigh just what I want to weigh. I am master of my own body now. I did not starve, but ate all I wanted to. I did not take Steam Baths. I did not wear Rubber Clothing. Electricity, or harmful exercises. I found the Secret of Reducing in a NATURAL WAY while doing my work, and only applied it. I have tried it on others. My Doctor says I am a perfect picture of health. I am so happy, healthy sailing. I am now a happy, healthy woman. Now I am going to help others to be happy. I have written a book on the subject. If you are fat, I want you to have it. It will tell you all about my Harmless, Dropless Method. Put it in a plain wrapper and send me your name and address. I will send it FREE, as long as the present supply lasts. If you have any friends who have taken Thin, Harmful Exercises, possibly have YOUR FAT, it is time for YOU to be sailing without a cause. Just send your name and address. A Postal Card will do and I'll be glad to send it to you so that you can quickly learn how to reduce yourself and be as happy as I am. Write today, as the advertisement may not appear again, in this paper.

More Methods of Food Doping

Mr. Cassidy tells you today of a new method the food dopers have used to adulterate cocoanut. This cocoanut was seized by the government and the shipper prosecuted. It's one more way you are robbed by the food dopesters.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

There's a new food dope born every minute. As soon as one is discovered and shown up, the food doper calls in the chemist and gets another one.

One of the newest ways the dopers have adopted is the use of glycerin and sugar in shredded cocoanut.

Years ago in Philadelphia I caught and prosecuted several dealers for adulterating cocoanut.

They were using sulphites to bleach the cocoanut and to add it to retain moisture. That made it weigh more and brought larger profits. I made several of them pay fines.

Recently the government seized some cocoanut shipped from New York to Camden, N. J., by the Dunham Manufacturing Company of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Cocoanut is Adulterated.

Analysis showed this cocoanut contained glycerin in excessive amounts. The cocoanut was pronounced adulterated and the firm paid a fine.

Glycerin may be harmless in small quantities. But when you eat a cocoanut cake or a pie from the bakeshop the top of which is sprinkled with cocoanut, you don't want to be eating glycerin.

If you want glycerin, you know enough to go to a drug store for it. You don't want to have it put into your stomach mixed in with cocoanut. If you need glycerin the doctor will prescribe it or the druggist sell it. You don't want it in a bakeshop, do you?

The Profit.

Excessive sugar was found in the cocoanut. Of course, sugar isn't harmful. But the Dunham Company was getting five cents for one eighth of a pound, or forty cents a pound for its cocoanut.

Sugar costs but five cents a pound. It was cheaper for the company to add a lot of sugar at five cents a pound and sell it at the rate of forty, wasn't it? There's where the fraud comes in. That's where the food doper cheats you. And that's why you need gentle pure food laws and constant watchfulness against the dopers.

A Fire Alarm.

It was in a country village that the swain had proposed for the hand of the village beauty and had been accepted.

He had bought the engagement ring and was hurrying to the home of his adored one. A friend stopped him to make inquiry concerning his haste.

"Hullo, there, Bob! Is there a fire?"

"Yes," replied Bow, with what breath he had left, "my heart's on fire and I'm going now to ring the village belle."

One of the Greatest Mystery Stories Ever Written

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1913, by Anna Katherine Green.

THE clergyman was an old man and had doubtless married a thousand couples. To him there was nothing strange in a pallid and weary-looking bride and a nervous, deeply excited bridegroom. He gave them a benevolent glance, lifted his book and began the service. But there were some persons present, relatives and friends of the contracting parties, who felt there was something unusual in the affair and craned their necks to get a glimpse of the bride's face, wisely forgetful of the splendor of her jewels, and the priceless lace of her veil which under other circumstances would have attracted all their attention. The bride, however, did not lift her eyes and when she spoke in answer to the minister's questions, the reply she gave was uttered in a voice so low that no one heard it but the bridegroom and the minister. But this is not unusual with brides, and the ceremony proceeded, and the time came for placing the ring on her finger.

A BAD POSITION

But here a difficulty arose. For some reason best known to herself Miss Gretorex had preferred to be married without gloves. There was, therefore, no one at hand to assist her in taking off her glove, and her own agitation making her unequal to the task, she found herself obliged, after an ineffectual effort or so, to stretch out her hand for the ring, with the glove still on it. Dr. Cameron, feeling her embarrassment, accepted the situation with his usual sang froid, and holding the ring on the first joint—for it would not slip all the way down on a finger so protected—was on the point of uttering the sacred vow, to love, cherish and protect her, when through the hush of the moment there came an interruption so startling and so wild that every head turned, and more than one rosy cheek grew pale. It was a scream, an unearthly and terrified scream! Coming from where? No one could tell. Speaking of what? Fear, dismay, anguish, anything, everything that was out of accord with the scene it had so weirdly interrupted.

Dr. Cameron, thinking of the banshee's warning, stretched out his arm to sustain his bride, whom this last and most fearful shock must surely rob of all strength. But he soon found that she needed no assistance. Instead of succumbing to the general fright, she seemed to rise above it, and contrary to every precaution of those about her, her head rose and her lip grew firm till she was absolutely masterful in her earnestness and determination. The minister caught her look, the bridegroom the infection of her spirit and the ceremony proceeded almost without the break of even a momentary hesitation. With the utterance of the benediction, a great sigh of relief rose from the vast assemblage, and many of the bride and groom turning to receive their congratulations, no one marvelled to observe her cheek so pale, or his brow so troubled, for the echo of that unexplained shriek was still ringing in all ears; and to superstitious minds if no others there was an omen in this weird interruption that was anything but reassuring.

Mr. and Mrs. Gretorex alone preserved their usual imperturbability. Only a smiling faces they greeted their child and shook hands with their new son-in-law, then as the wonder and alarm about them took speech, and such phrases as "What do you think it was? Did you ever hear anything like it?" began to be whispered about, Mr. Gretorex stepped forward and remarked:

"We have a servant who is subject to fits of nervous excitement. It was her voice you heard."

And immediately the countenances of all brightened and the line of friends and acquaintances began to form and congratulations were offered and the scene regained its lost cheerfulness and brilliancy.

Only in two hearts the shadow yet rested, and upon two brows apprehension had set its seal too deeply for a word to drive it away. Dr. Cameron and his bride were not lovers in the explanation which had been offered, and to one of them at least the future held terror which made the present ordeal of smiles, bows and mechanical hand shaking a torture which was only made endurable by the fear of reawakening suspicion in the breasts of the guests. And even this thought lost its sustaining power at last, and Dr. Cameron, who was constantly on the watch for signs of weakening on the part of his bride, turned and drew up a chair for her, saying:

"You are overtaxing your strength. Take it easier, my darling."

A smile, extraordinarily sweet, answered this last attempt at conjugal tenderness, but it soon flitted away, leaving her paler and more hollow-eyed than before.

THE SCREAM

"I cannot stand this long," she murmured. "I must know what that scream meant. Do you think I could be excused from receiving any more congratulations? I want to go to my room." She paused with an imploring glance, then continued, "I must go to my room if only for a moment. I cannot breathe here."

"There is your mother," he rejoined, surprised and yet touched by her appeal. "She understands these matters; let her manage it for you."

And anxious to save his newly made wife all the effort he could, he heard forward, and touching Mrs. Gretorex on the arm, whispered:

"Gretorex is really feeling quite ill. Is there no way of releasing her from all this nonsense? She wants to get to her room."

The haughty mother surveyed her daughter in surprise.

"What is the matter?" she asked. "You were well enough this afternoon."

"I know—reminded her daughter with an effort, but that scream——"

"What! haven't you heard Margaret cry out before? You are foolish to notice it; everything is all right now."

"But I want to see the low reply. "Stay and here the young bride made an effort visible to all. "I cannot be myself till I know that it was Margaret who screamed. Send and see for me."

The mother's lip curled, but she did not refuse her daughter's request. Beckoning a servant to her, she whispered him an order and turned again to her guests. Mrs. Cameron endeavored to do the same, but her smile had become ghastly and she committed more than one gaucherie. At length the servant not returning, she gave up all attempt to sustain her part, and sat literally shivering, her eye on the door by which the servant had disappeared as if upon his reappearance alone her life and reason depended.

Dr. Cameron, who lost nothing of all this, even while endeavoring to cover up her abstraction by renewed attention to the guests crowding around them, was about to suggest the advisability of her following out her first impulse and going to her room, when suddenly her whole bearing changed, and she rose with a hurried apology and hastened toward the door. Her husband followed, but her action was so quick and she through so great that she escaped him for the moment, and he did not see her again till she appeared on the stairs going rapidly up.

She was moving eagerly and showed no signs of weakness, so he did not hasten, there being more than one of his particular friends in the way, ready with jest or congratulation to detain him. Some few minutes therefore had elapsed before he reached her door. It was closed and he knocked, expecting it to be opened immediately.

But though he repeated and irritated between pleasure by the succession of incomprehensible occurrences, he shook the handle of the door and spoke her name with decision.

It had the desired effect, for in a moment the key was turned in the lock and the door opened just wide enough to show her face. He was startled to perceive that the room behind her was perfectly dark.

A REQUEST

"I will be out in a moment," she declared, and smiled a hurried dismissal.

But he was not going to face the crowd below again, so he did not turn at her bidding, but kept his place, while pushing, she stepped out into the hall and said:

"I am feeling better. If you will give me ten minutes more rest and quiet I think I shall be able to go downstairs again."

Why did not Dr. Cameron feel reassured at this, especially as she was looking better? He could not tell.

"Are you sure," he inquired, "that you are not ill? Shall I not stay with you and take you down?"

But her look trembled with an appeal so urgent, she seemed so anxious for solitude and repose that he had not the heart to refuse his own claims to her. He therefore withdrew after a comforting word or two, determined to step into the room which he had occupied before the ceremony and there await her coming. But before he could reach it Mrs. Gretorex herself came hurrying up the stairs, and Peter says—he was on the stairs, sir, at the time—that the scream came from one lady's room. But I think he was mistaken, for there was no one there to scream——

"That's my dressing-case or some such woman!" queried the other.

The servant shook his head.

"But I met some such woman go in before we went down stairs," persisted the doctor.

"Very likely, but she must have come out again; for Miss Gretorex—I ask your pardon, sir, Mrs. Cameron, locked the door after her, as she wouldn't have done if she had left anybody in the room, and she has the key with her, as perhaps you did, too, for you were standing where you are now, sir, if you remember."

Dr. Cameron did remember, though the incident made no impression on him at the time; and puzzled more than he wished to appear, he waved the man aside and made another attempt to enter his room. But he was stopped again and this time by his wife's voice. He turned quickly; she was advancing toward him with a light step, her veil off, her gloves torn from her hands.

"Pardon me," she entreated, "but I have changed my mind. I do not see any reason why we should go downstairs again before all those people. I am not well, and they know it, and you hear yourself what a good time they are having without us. Let us go away at once. I do so long to be out of the house—and—and you will please me so if you say yes."

She laid her ungloved hand upon his arm, but she quickly withdrew it. Her eyes, however, continued raised to his with a look of which he felt the eagerness and also the inscrutability. He did not know what to say.

"We are going to Washington, are we not?" she now said half interrogated, half asserted.

He replied that this had been his intention.

"Then we shall have to start soon, for it is the night for Jersey City."

"I had expected——" he began, but he did not continue. Why waste words when she was going to Washington and what his own better judgment told him was best?

"You will go?" she persisted.

"As soon as you can get ready."

A look of relief withdrew it. Her face also smiled and a tint of color came into her cheek.

"I can see good," she declared warmly. Then as a loud swell of music rose from below she glanced nervously at her dress and drew back. "I have to put on my traveling suit," she remarked. "Now that is done we will call mother. Wait for me in your room." And with a nod she glided from him, her long train sweeping behind her, with reckless haste.

To Be Continued Monday.

Boston Women Who Have Made Good

NO. 11.—MISS AMY SACKER

Miss Amy Sacker has been known in Boston for ten years as a designer of book covers, and also as an efficient teacher and director of an art school.

Like many other young women who have achieved something in life, Miss Sacker possesses many characteristics, any one of which might have meant success for her.

"Don't do a thing as well as you can do it, but as well as it possibly can be done."

Here is Miss Sacker's philosophy of success put concisely just as she puts it to her pupils many times a year. "Do not go about the world making excuses to publishers and employers why you have failed to come up to their requirements; the business world is not interested in your failures, and apologies are poor substitutes for achievements," is another of Miss Sacker's sentiments.

Her career as an artist began when she was a little girl of ten or twelve and refused to play with her companions because of her absorbed interest in her drawings. Her parents recognized early natural talent and from the first encouraged her in the pursuit of the art she loved.

With freedom to cultivate the genius that was in her she made rapid advancement, and while quite young had been discovered by Boston publishers, who soon began to call on her for book covers.

Today more than 700 of her illustrations are to be found on works of fiction, on school books, and on scientific treatises. Wherever the stories of G. D. Roberts circulate there go the effective covers wrought by Miss Amy Sacker. Children who pour over the latest editions of Louisa M. Alcott may find her handiwork on the outside of the covers. Hundreds of modern school books carry her interesting three-color designs, over which she has kept days of thought that education may come to the child the moment he takes a book into his hands.

Miss Sacker might well be called a business artist, for she never forgets and never allows her pupils to forget that unless what they are doing has commercial value, it will never be seen, and therefore of little use to anyone.

Because of this fundamental principle, she keeps in close touch with the actual business world and is continually cautioning her girls against an idealized art with no practical importance.

Her pupils make pilgrimages to publishing concerns and observe all the processes in book making; they learn the limitations of material and of color presses and they are made to study the demands of the market. She says:

I am never able to understand how anyone can really teach who is not actually engaged in commercial production or in some way vitally connected with the business world. With the continual changes that come in tastes and in imposed methods of doing things the artist or artisan who neglects to keep abreast of the times very soon is left with his pupils in an eddy while the world sweeps by.

If I have made good in my art and in my teaching it is simply because I have done everything to perfect myself in my occupation and have made myself proficient in a dozen branches of designing.

"WE should be charitable with the man who goes wrong," the women say from the lecture platform. "Perhaps," pulling out the tremolo stop on their voices, "he never had home influences."

Chauncey Devere Appleton, who is always looking for material for addresses to the Children's Congress, of which he is president, slipped a pad of writing paper in his book one other night. While ostensibly reading, he would make note of the home influences with which he was surrounded.

"Do you remember, Lysander John, Sarah his wife, "the night you proposed to me—"

"I never proposed to you at all," snapped her husband, with unusual coldness. "The third time I called you pushed me into the parlor, where I found myself standing in front of a preacher."

Mrs. Appleton sighed, and looked at her daughter. Her daughter gave her a look of understanding that was not complimentary to father.

"I told those Kennedys who took Chauncey Devere and me out automobiling today that we had individual automobiles in our family," spoke Daysey Mayme. "I thought I would impress them."

"Yes, and when it was time for us to stop you reached up to pull the bell cord," interjected her brother. There was a slap and a scream.

"Leave your brother alone," commanded their father. "Listen" (to his wife). Then he read of a frightful railroad accident, going into all the grewsome details.

"He reads that sort of stuff to you," whispered Daysey Mayme to her mother, "to scare you, so you wouldn't take a trip on a free pass to a family reunion."

Lysander John likes to read out loud. "I see," he resumed, looking up from a tariff report, "that stockings are going to be higher."

"But we can't wear them any higher with those long corsets," protested his wife.

"I told the Kennedys," continued Daysey Mayme, "that the last time we entertained we had seven helping in the kitchen."

"Was that the truth?"—from her father.

"Of course it was," replied his daughter. "Didn't we have all our pew kin out there?"

Lysander John flung down his paper in a rage, stamped on it, and left the room, closing the door with a slam. Daysey Mayme turned to her brother.

"Look at your hands," she screamed, "you haven't washed them today."

"Home influences," began Chauncey Devere, on his writing pad; then, laying aside the dignity of his great office as president of the Children's Congress, he yielded to a rare boyish impulse and wrote one word:

"NIL."

Big Bait—Small Fish

A fellow would-be traveler was amazed at seeing an Irishman busily employed poking a five-pound note through a crack in the boarding which formed the wayside railway station platform.

"What, under the sun, are you doing that for?" he asked.

"Why, y'see, sir," replied the Irishman, without raising an eye from his work, "a minute ago Oi dropped a penny through this crack, an' now Oi'm pushing a fiver through so's to make it wort' me while to pull up the board and get th' penny."

The Brighter Side of Turkey Trotting

An Expert's Advice on How This Famous Dance Can Be Purged of All Objectionable Features

THE new school of turkey trotting has brought into existence two groups of rabid partisans; those who do the dance and know how jolly it is the dancing, and those who look on and see how shocking is the prancing. And meanwhile turkey trotting is so earnestly done that it seems in a fair way to be done to death—and a fallow field for humorists will thus become sterile and barren of little jokes like the famous: "She is more trotted against than trotting."

In our age of specialization, turkey trotting is not sufficiently specialized, and every little freak step that wriggles its way into life masquerades under the one name or that of some barnyard or menagerie relative. There is a brighter side to turkey trotting; there is a possibility of having it become a dance as well regulated as the two step, and yet free to express the true dancing joy-offering of the partners who merrily whirl through its mazes.

For confirmation of this theory I went to Leon Errol, the clever originator of "turkish trottishness," and with clever Stella Chanteine, the partner of dances and of life, to help him, Mr. Errol showed me how you should and how you shouldn't do the "trot."

CORRECT POSITION

"Here is the correct position for learning the trot," said Mr. Errol, illustrating the while. "The girl places her hands on the shoulders of her partner. The man places one hand under the elbow of his partner and his best elbow under her other arm. In this position every sway of a partner who knows the dance throws the shoulders of the other partner into the proper swing; not a wriggle or a suggestive movement, but the swaying to music that is the natural expression used in all dances that are a real expression of joy set to music instead of conventional ballroom steps.

"If you want to see the art of dancing, naturally you go to the Grecs, and you enjoy without any thought of spending years in trying to master the art of dancing as she has done.

"But when you go to see the modern, up-to-date dancing of the stage, you have a weather eye on learning to do it too—and springing a new step at the next cabaret you favor. Here are three things to remember about stage dancing—it consists of tempo, a trick step and a bit of acting to catch the eye. In comedy dancing like mine, the tempo is very quick—whirlingly rapid, although it is brisk in its movements, that fairly pile up on top of one another. Then there is the trick step worked out to be as different as possible, and finally the comic element to make it go with the audience.

"The amateur turkey trotter must copy the first two parts of stage turkey trotting, and avoid the acting like grim death.

"Don't play to the gallery—don't do an exaggerated step and fairly revel in the idea that the people are looking at you in admiring wonder. They are probably wondering all right—how you can be so ungainly and foolish.

ALLOW FOR FREEDOM

"Take a refined position that leaves at least a foot of space between the partners and allow for freedom of motion. Holding your partner too closely not only makes the dance suggestive, and gives too much chance to the critical enemies of turkey trotting to get an their work, but it makes it impossible for the amateur to dance with the graceful free sway that is the chief beauty of turkey trotting.

"Then with a clear picture in your mind of what you want to do, work out a step. Sometimes Miss Chateaine and I see little children dancing to an organ grinder's tunes on the streets—that suggests a step—and we may spend as much as two hours working out the one step.

"Turkey trotting demands a free yet firm position that lets the partners work together; an absolute feeling for time, and ability to follow the music without a break; the utmost patience in working out a step, and ability and imagination to work out little trick steps that will add to the mere sway that is the basis of all turkey trotting and allied dances.

"We must always keep in mind that this is a dance in which shoulders count. In the now sedate waltz, the position of arm-around-waist used to be considered rather risque—well, you don't have to assume that position if you are going to trot correctly. The position I suggest—girl's arms on man's shoulders, and man's arms used as levers under girl's elbows, is staid, respectable and guaranteed to produce graceful rhythmical trotting.

"As in other departments of life, and dancing," concluded Mr. Errol, "there is a right way and there is a wrong way. But the right way to turkey trot is pleasing to observe and pleasing to do. If the amateur will assume the position I teach and practice one step at a time patiently and in faithful effort to keep in perfect rhythm with the music, he will soon find himself able to do a modern dance without a shade of vulgarity and without a trace of amateurish ill-at-easeness."

Their Married Life

The Menu Without Prices Spoils Helen's Dinner When They Dine on the Bois

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"WITH no prices on the menu," repeated Helen in amazement. "Then they can charge us anything they please!"

"That's the idea. Most of the smart places in Paris never price their food. They're supposed to cater to people who're concerned only with the quality of the dishes—not with the price."

"But Warren, WE don't want to go to such a place! I'd be so worried about what the check was going to be—I couldn't eat a thing."

"Well, we're going to one right now for dinner—Cafe d'Armenonville. One of the show places in the Bois. You'll see more smart Parisians there than you've seen yet. While we're over here we're going to do Paris. What difference does a few dollars make one way or the other?"

A little later they left the hotel. Outside Warren raised his cane at a passing taxi.

WARREN DETERMINED

"Of course we're got to have a cab," impatiently, as Helen made her usual protest. "It's the only way you can get to that place. Now you leave this to me. We're going to Armenonville's tonight, and we're going to do the thing right. Hang the expense!"

When Warren started out in this spirit Helen knew it was useless to try to curb him. He was in the mood to spend money—and he was going to spend it. She leaned back in the cab with a sigh of resignation.

But as this was Helen's first drive through the Champs Elysees, she soon forgot everything else in the beauty of the scene.

"I'll not have the time, but you ought to come out to the Bois some afternoon for tea," suggested Warren. "Nothing like it in the world. One of the show places of Paris. There's Armenonville's through there," pointing to a mass of brilliant lights glimmering through a grove of trees.

Cabs, taxis and victorias were lined up three and four abreast in the wide graveled driveways before this famous restaurant.

"But we're not going to keep this taxi?" asked Helen, anxiously, as they waited their turn to draw up before the entrance.

"That's just what we're going to do," snapped Warren. "We'll not take any chances of getting one when we're through."

Warren led the way through the spacious hallway to the garden beyond. The place was like fairyland, with banks of red geraniums, a gleaming fountain, and ropes of colored lights festooned through trees and shrubbery. There must have been a hundred or more tables on the lawn, yet all were taken, and a group of people were waiting.

"You stay here," Warren strode off determinedly after a head waiter.

Helen's gaze followed him anxiously. She saw him slip some money into the hand of the suave Frenchman, and a moment later they were being seated at one of the few tables that had been "reserved."

"Warren, I thought you didn't believe in bribing head waiters?"

"Well, you've got to do it here. This is a show place, I tell you, and you've got to come across. We'd have stood there all night without a table if I hadn't forked up."

HER FIRST CONCERN

Helen's first concern was in the menu—a large card with a fantastically decorated border of lobsters and crabs. She had hoped all along that Warren was wrong, and that the prices would be given, but there was not a single figure. This bill of fare was to show only what you could get—not what you would have to pay for it.

"Oh, dear, just order one or two things! I'm not very hungry—and you had luncheon, didn't you?"

But Warren only glowered at her, and gave his order to the waiter by checking off with his pencil some of the dishes with the longest and, as Helen thought, most expensive looking French names.

"Now, see here," when the waiter had gone, "this isn't so bad as you think. The theory of this is that they charge in proportion to what you order. For instance, if you only have a roast and a salad, you pay more proportionately for those two dishes than you would if you had four or five. That's fair enough."

"Well, if that's their method, then why don't they put down the prices and deduct a certain percentage when you order a number of things? Wouldn't that be a good idea for any restaurant? Think how much more people would order more," insisted Helen growing enthusiastic over her idea. "I'm sure any of the big American restaurants would coin money on that plan."

"Better try to sell 'em the idea when you get back," scoffed Warren. "They might pay you something for it."

"Well, they might!" defiantly.

Just then a striking beauty, in a clinging white gown, and a drooping leghorn hat with red poppies, swept by, leaving a trail of perfume.

"Dear, some of the gowns ARE beautiful," mused Helen, now giving herself up to a study of the place.

A PRETTY GIRL

"Not a bad-looking girl over there in yellow," commented Warren.

"I was just going to speak of her—think's the most WONDERFUL gown!"

The girl was dark and slender, with heavy brown hair drawn low into a simple coil on her neck. Her dress was of pale yellow chiffon, with brown fringe; her hat of the same chiffon was wreathed with yellow-petalled, brown-eyed daisies, and the streamers of brown velvet ribbon were knotted under her chin.

Most of the hats had either ties or streamers, with the trimming placed at some daring angle. While they must have looked very extreme in the shop windows, they were charming on the women who wore them.

"After all the French women DO know how to wear their clothes."

"The ones you see here ought to," was Warren's comment. That's about their only job."

"Dear, I haven't any idea what I'm eating!" Helen exclaimed suddenly.

"Well, it's good, isn't it? That's sweet bread with truffles and wine sauce, en casserole—one of their specialties here. Only place in Paris you can get it like this."

But to Helen the food was always secondary to the atmosphere of the place and the people. And now she absentmindedly ate her dinner, intent upon the scene about her.

"A woman never has any palate," grumbled Warren.

"This dish is a work of art. There's a smoothness and flavor to this sauce that you wouldn't get anywhere else in the world. But you don't appreciate it." A dinner like this is wasted on any woman."

"Why, dear, that isn't fair," indignantly. "I think it's delicious, and I'm eating every bit of it."

A TREAT

"Oh, you're eating it, but might as well be eating corned beef hash in a dairy lunch room. I tell you this is a treat! No wonder the chef who made that sauce didn't want a price put on it. You can't price a thing like that any more than you can price a rare picture," enthused Warren, growing eloquent under the influence of the vintage wine.

Even Helen forgot her dread of the check and became enthusiastic when the waiter served the fruits au chaupagne. It was a tall glass dish of cut fruit, wonderful strawberries, cherries, pineapples and peaches floating in an iced syrup of blended wines and cordials.

When later the check was brought, face down, on a plate, instinctively Helen leaned forward to see the total. But Warren took it up quickly, glanced over the items, drew a crisp note from his wallet and laid it over the check. Helen was not familiar enough with French money to know the amount of the note, nor could she tell by the change returned.

"Dear, how much was that check?" unable to keep back the question.

"Well, I've paid it, haven't I? And it was a blamed good dinner. Now we'll have no harangues over expenses this evening. Come on—let's see if we can find that cab."

The cab! Helen had wholly forgotten that the cab was waiting—and they had been there almost three hours!

Warren located their driver, and in a few moments they were whirling back through the Champs Elysees, now more beautiful than ever, with the lights gleaming through the dark trees, and with every now and then a glimpse of the Seine and its jewelled bridges.

But the charm of all this was lost on Helen. She was not leaning back and enjoying the beauty of the drive. Instead, she was sitting bolt upright, every muscle strained, as she tensely tried to figure out how much that dinner and the three hours' wait of the cab must have cost.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular at the close of trading with the improvement in this market more marked in mining than in railroads or industrials. Butte & Superior, North Butte, Wolverine, Alaska Gold, Mohawk, Old Dominion and Superior Boston were among those to show small gains. Steel ended the day unchanged in New York. Union Pacific was up a little and Erie, Amalgamated, Reading and Southern Pacific were lower by fractions. Utah Copper and American Smelting had advanced and Chesapeake & Ohio was a shade stronger. Canadian Pacific had gained a point. Business was deadly dull everywhere.

The New York cash statement is as follows—average statement: Excess cash reserve, $29,650,850; decrease, $3,772,600; loans, decrease, $7,110,000; specie, increase, $6,241,000; legal tenders, decrease, $1,261,000; net deposits, decrease, $8,481,000; circulation, increase, $120,400. Actual statement: Loans, increase, $2,800; specie, increase, $1,000; legal tenders, decrease, $3,885,000; net deposits, decrease, $7,058,000; reserve, decrease, $1,940,100.

Stocks Lower in New York.

Prices ranged lower when New York opened and did not improve during the first hour. Changes averaged small and trading was listless. The closing of shorts and when this was completed a heavier tone generally prevailed.

The Curb market was steady.

Banks Ask for Crop Funds

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo has received telegrams from about 100 Southern or Western banks asking for from $25,000 to $1,000,000 each of the money which will be deposited to move the fall crops. The applications called for about $20,000,000 in all. The Treasury Department has already from $25,000,000 to $50,000,000 for the purpose.

McAdoo is now gathering information as to the relative needs of each section where harvesting is now under way or soon to begin, and expects to have the money in the banks in ample time for the movement of crops.

Treasury officials are confident that the Secretary's plan would be a powerful factor in averting or relieving the prospective tightness of money characteristic of the crop moving season.

One Washington dispatch says: "Radical members of Congress from Western and Southern States expressed great satisfaction today over the announced intention of Secretary McAdoo. They regard his action as a stab at the New York banks. Congressmen who were in favor of asset currency were particularly pleased over what Mr. McAdoo has in mind. His declaration of willingness to accept commercial paper at 65 per cent. of its face value as security for the deposit of government funds was much praise from them.

"Nobody in official authority has thus far challenged the legality of Secretary McAdoo's plan of depositing funds in national banks on the security of commercial paper. It is expected, however, that his right to accept such security will be challenged. In making the decision that commercial paper would be received at a valuation of 65 per cent. of its face as collateral for the deposit of the funds deposited, Mr. McAdoo provided under a liberal construction of the currency law of March 1, 1913.

U. S. Loans May Tighten Money.

Wall Street does not believe that Secretary McAdoo's plan to have the government help finance crop moving is going to relax money market tension. One banker said it might seriously tighten money, as out-of-town bankers who get the money at 2 per cent. would immediately pay off New York loans carrying 5 to 6½ per cent., so that the money would find its way to New York and not meet any commercial or agricultural needs.

Bankers to Advise Reserve Board.

The House Banking Committee which is framing the new currency bill has finally ratified amendments creating an advisory council of twelve bankers to sit with the Federal Reserve Board and advise concerning general business condition, discount rates, rediscount, business, note issues, purchase and sale of securities and gold, creation of new reserve banks, and open market operations by the central reserve banks.

The section provides for as many members as there are Federal reserve districts, each Federal reserve bank by its board of directors to select annually one member, who shall receive no compensation.

As an emergency measure, it was provided that reserve banks should be required when necessary, to reduce the discount paper of all reserve banks under a special tax of 1 to 3 per cent.

The administration practically kept in control of the situation when it defeated radical amendments. The committee turned down the Wingo provision against interlocking boards of bank directors and the Henry plan for industrial, commercial and agricultural currency. The latter was to have been based upon corn, wheat and cotton warehouse receipts. Messrs. Wingo and Henry left the committee room in the Democratic caucus on the bill on August 11, and declared there they may take it into the House.

MORGAN CLEARS $10,000,000 ON NEW HAVEN DEAL

Boston banking men realized today that the proposed issue of over sixty-seven million dollars worth of convertible debenture bonds by the New Haven Railroad will merely furnish another opportunity for the "Morgan crowd" in Wall street to clean up a large profit.

It is estimated that, in underwriting the proposed issue, the House of Morgan will take a profit of from $6,000,000 to $10,000,000, if not more.

Proof of the intention to "work" this debenture issue for what the "Street" calls a "killing," came in the brief announcement from J. P. Morgan & Co., notifying applicants for the bonds that their applications could be granted owing to the pressure of subscriptions.

In short, the intended debenture issue is already over-subscribed. There is nothing for outsiders. All the cream is being kept for those in the know.

A study of New Haven quotations for the past six months convinces many that the big financial powers, who use New Haven for coinage instead of transportation purposes, have decided to precipitate a shrewdly made scheme to clean up a tremendous profit.

Briefly—the debenture bonds are convertible, or exchangeable for New Haven stock at par after five years. Therefore, a $100 debenture is worth the market value of New Haven stock. If the debentures are issued at 80 and New Haven stock is quoted low then the issue can be subscribed cheaply. Then, if the stock is pushed up the debentures gain value and the underwriters and subscribers profit accordingly. It is calculated that the debentures will gain within two points of the stock. Low stock—a low-buying price for insiders on the debentures. Put up New Haven stocks—up go the debentures. Big profits! Watch the course of the stock, say shrewd observers.

Since December New Haven stock has dropped from 135¾ down to 100¾, yesterday's low mark.

The inference is obvious.

The first known of the proposed issue was on July 21, the day before the first meeting of the New Haven directors' special committee to choose a successor to President Mellen. The announcement came from New Haven this effect:

"A special meeting of the stockholders of the New Haven Road will be held here (New Haven) at noon, August 22, to vote on authorizing $67,552,400 six per cent, twenty-year debentures, convertible into stock at par time after five years from their date until, but no later than, fifteen years from their date, at the rate of one share of stock for each $100 of debentures."

In this connection an illuminating letter was issued by Louis D. Brandeis of this city, explaining that the New Haven does not need to make this monster debenture issue to meet notes, as it might much better sell some of the securities it already owns.

Mrs. Abbie Bella Benva, thirty years old, of No. 8 Newland street, who is to marry seventy-one-year-old John Gile of Candia, N. H., today told the story of a long romance that led to plans for their marriage next Wednesday.

Gile is a farmer and Mrs. Benva is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. George of Peterboro, N. H. She said today:

"Both Mr. Gile and my father served four years in the war—Mr. Gile in the Fourteenth United States Infantry and my father in a Massachusetts regiment. I feel now that it is my duty to be a helpmate and friend to Mr. Gile. He has known our family since I was a little child, so you can see this is no hurried match.

"We are to live in Haverhill after a honeymoon spent among the hills of old New Hampshire."

ABBIE BELLE BENVA, thirty, Boston widow, who weds man who fought with her father in Civil War.

PRESIDENT WOULD MUZZLE H. L. WILSON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Chairman Flood of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House, today admitted that President Wilson had called him on the telephone yesterday and requested that Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson should not be called before the committee.

"The President declared that Ambassador Wilson was a bitter partisan of Huerta," said Flood, "and he did not wish any further exploitation of the ambassador's views in behalf of Huerta."

The constitutionalist faction in Mexico will be heard by the United States. The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations today determined to hold a meeting next Wednesday at which persons now in Washington who are interested in the various phases of the Mexican situation will be give an opportunity to be heard.

Secretary of State Bryan today issued another statement attacking what he characterized as "Scarehead jingoism."

The statement came as the result of published reports that the secretary's request for congressional appropriation of $500,000 to help Americans from Mexico was the first step in the administration's policy of intervention.

"In doubling aid to any indigent person desiring to leave Mexico," says Mr. Bryan, "this government is simply doing what it does at any time and anywhere when American lives are endangered by insurrection, and there is no reason why any one should attempt to misconstrue it."

The Mexican situation, according to Mr. Bryan, remains unchanged. The request for $1500,000 is being severely criticised by members of the House Appropriations Committee, and he may have to be content with $50,000 or less.

Democratic leaders in the Senate decided today to adopt on Monday two resolutions offered by Senator Fall of New Mexico. The first resolution calls for information from the State Department concerning the number of Americans killed, injured or imprisoned in Mexico and American properties damaged in Mexico.

The second resolution proclaims the right of protection for American citizens under the constitution and international law wherever they may be.

First Smack for "Kiss Me Quick"

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 2.—With Helen Lowell as the leading lady, and Arthur Aylesworth the chief fun-maker, Philip Bartholomae's farce, "Kiss Me Quick," was given its first production at the Broadway Theatre. The play began its run at the Shubert Theatre, Boston, Monday night.

Rich Rewards For All

In the American's Great Picture Puzzle Contest

In twenty-seven days the American's Picture Puzzle Contest will have reached its end.

That is to say, the thousands of contestants who have been solving the interesting puzzle pictures from day to day will have the satisfaction of knowing that their efforts will be speedily judged.

There is absolutely no telling who is going to be the fortunate winner of the capital prize of $1,000.

The successful contestant may be a boy or a girl or a young man or an old lady; certainly the person who turns in the correct set of seventy-five solutions ought to be congratulated by all the other competitors.

It might be worth while to say here that every one should pay attention to neatness and legibility in turning in their answers. Remember, in the case of a tie, specific punctuality and neatness will decide the winner.

Therefore, it is to the advantage of every contestant to be as careful as possible in writing his or her answers.

We want to encourage those competitors who entered the race after the contest was well under way. There is no reason why they should be discouraged. Of course, it is harder work to try to solve two or three puzzle pictures each day than it is to try to find the answer to one, but it is not impossible.

With the guide at your elbow you have the advantage of being able to look for the correct answers to three pictures at the same time, and it is not at all unlikely that you may find these three answers in the same time you would find one.

The guide has proven of invaluable assistance to all the contestants. It has been worth while to know that its pages contain the absolutely correct solutions to all the pictures.

The American, in offering the guide for twenty-five cents, or five cents extra if sent by mail, puts in the hands of the contestants a treasure of information at a most modest sum.

This has been appreciated by all concerned. The guide may be obtained at the Promotion Dept., No. 8 Winthrop square, and also the puzzle pictures you have missed. Back pictures may be obtained at the regular rates of the American, that is, one cent for each daily picture and five cents for each Sunday picture. The Promotion Dept. will send them at once, so that you can get right to work.

The big cash prizes offered ought to furnish an incentive to any one who is really anxious to make money out of a little mental effort.

The first prize is $1,000 in gold.

The second prize is $800 in gold.

The third prize is $500 in gold.

Then there are 152 other cash awards.

The truth is you cannot afford not to enter the contest. The stake is so large for the small effort demanded that you will be cheating yourself if you do not get into the race.

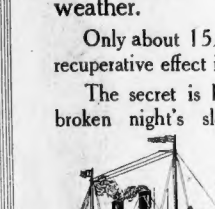
The OUTSIDE Line to NEWYORK

(Around Cape Cod)

It is wonderful what this trip does for the man who is working hard in hot weather.

Only about 15½ hours from port to port, but the recuperative effect is amazing.

The secret is breathing salt ocean air, the unbroken night's sleep out at sea, the complete relaxation and change from the daily grind.



Leave India Wharf at 5 P. M. weekdays and Sunday. Due New York 6:30 next morning. Fare $4.00; inside 2-berth staterooms, $1.00; 2-berth outside rooms, $2.00. Electric fans in inside rooms. Tickets and staterooms at India Wharf and Tourist Offices on Washington Street.

Britain's Sordid Attitude Towards the Panama Exposition

Great Britain's refusal to take part in the Panama Canal Exposition of 1915 may be accepted in sorrow rather than in anger—sorrow that the government of so great an empire should have sunk into such a narrow rut of parochial politics that for the sake of a ha'pe'th of self-advantage it would sacrifice its share in the nobler spirit of rejoicing in a world's great work well done.

Here, then, is the childish retort to the refusal of our government to submit to arbitration the dispute about the canal tolls—"We won't play in your yard."

Of the dispute itself this newspaper has already on many occasions expressed its emphatic views. Based on a shadowy protectorate over the Mosquito Indians, in which there was never any practical reality, Great Britain undertakes, under the letter of certain treaties made at a time when the idea of a canal at Panama was not dreamed of, to tell the United States that it cannot send its own coastwise traffic at a lower rate than foreign ocean traffic through a canal every dollar of whose vast cost it has itself paid for and which runs through territory entirely under the American flag!

In practical operation the amount involved on the ocean-going traffic of foreign ships would admittedly be so small that the raising of a dispute about it at all by any foreign government becomes a shining example of "hot potato"-stand diplomacy.

From a government that acquired the Suez Canal through the devious, if forceful, methods Great Britain employed—always, of course, strictly observing every honorable obligation to its neighbors from the purely and curious British viewpoint—the Panama protest was simply an astonishing exhibition of sordid and envious greed.

It would be difficult to believe that such a decision as this by Great Britain represented anything more than the clamor of its Tory press—the kind of press that a day or two ago exploited an article calling for the abolition in tennis of the overhand service which enabled McLoughlin to win back the Davis cup—if it were not for the fact that the government is so largely radical in its tone. It is difficult, even with that in mind, to believe that this decision about the San Francisco fair can possibly represent general British sentiment toward America.

Americans, generally speaking, are so broad-minded that they do not want fully to realize that it may be only "hands across the sea" when there is something substantial in Uncle Sam's. They know full well that the friendship that has to be bought is not worth paying for. John Bull is surely not so poverty-stricken that he must haggle over a penny with a friend. This show of petty temper is, alas, a deplorable betrayal of a mean spirit.

And to base his position on a high-sounding principle is for John Bull to pose on a pedestal of lofty self-righteousness which history never erected for him, and which would topple if tapped with even a toy hammer of truth.

But, if great nations can sometimes be small, smaller nations can frequently be big. Twenty-two, including even Japan, have agreed to exhibit at the Panama-Pacific Exposition and its success and interest cannot now be materially impaired. The canal itself, the greatest wonder of the world wrought by man, will be open, and ships of all nations, even those of Great Britain, will be passing through it on their voyages over the new trade routes of the oceans, opening up new countries and new enterprises and new profits for all the peoples of the earth to share—among them Great Britain, and not the least.

Could Morgan Be King of Italy?

No, and if He Were Living He Would Not Want to Be. He had an Easier Kingship

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Is the following statement true? That some years ago Mr. John Pierpont Morgan returned a stolen relic very much sought for, which he purchased for a very large sum of money, to the King of Italy. And the King, in gratitude for this magnanimous deed, conferred upon Mr. Morgan a title which makes him a member of the royal family. And in case of the death of every member of the real family, which I think impossible, Mr. Morgan would become King. And in case of his predecease the throne would devolve to his eldest son.

Thanking you for your consideration of this letter, I am sincerely yours, ROCCO MONTANI.

No, the King of Italy did not give Mr. Morgan a title of nobility that caused him to be included in the royal family. And Mr. Morgan and his heirs never could inherit the throne of Italy.

The King of Italy would have no power, even if he had the inclination, to do that.

Should the present King of Italy die, and should his heirs die, the question of his succession would be settled by the Italian people, who have always shown a great capacity for ruling themselves or selecting their own rulers.

An ending of the present dynasty, to which the Italians for good reasons are attached, would result probably in the establishment of an Italian republic. For Italy is really a republic in fact today.

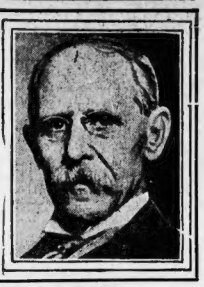
CHILD TOIL OF PRESENT AGE WORST EVER



History Has Never Known a Slavery So Blighting as That of the Young Victims of Modern Commercialism—Money Spent in Pure Extravagance Would Soon Relieve These Children from the Grasp of Despair

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

IF one-half the energy that is wasted upon impracticable schemes of social reform and one-tenth of the money that is thrown away in pure extravagance were concentrated upon the solution of the problem of enfranchising the children of the so-called civilized nations from their bondage to Giant Despair, whose dungeons echo to the pitiless grinding of the money-making machines, there would go up, within a year's time, such a paean of rejoicing childhood as would warm the cockles of the world's great heart—for the world has a heart, if you can but reach it!

I have just been reading an article on "Children in Bondage," in the Good Housekeeping Magazine, which ought, in itself, to start a revolution. And it has recalled an experience of my own bearing upon this great question of child slavery.

Some years ago I went on a lecturing tour in the South. I stopped one night in one of the busiest of those industrial cities which have sprung up within a couple of decades in that wonderful part of our country.

Chief Promoter of Lecture Showed Writer Thro' His Mill

The next morning the owner of a great mill, who was one of the chief promoters of the local lecture course, and who took great satisfaction in his connection with so commendable an enterprise, and gladly spent money to keep it going, invited me to visit his mill.

It was near noon when I approached its formidable walls, and was admitted within its guarded gates, and I stopped amazed at the first sight of human life that my eyes fell upon there.

It was a long row of little boys and girls, pale-faced and haggard, and clothed in the flimsiest and poorest garments, with tin pails on their arms—waiting in line to carry their dinners to their brothers and sisters who were haltered to the treadmills within. Some of them glanced quickly about, at the least sound, with a scared expression, as if they expected a lash! Evidently there was no time in that busy place for human beings to stop to eat, otherwise than as the overworked dray horse stops at the edge of the pavement to have a bag of meal hung over his neck, with his nose thrust into it!

My interest in the sights that the mill might have to offer was already chilled, but, nevertheless, I went in. I remembered how delighted the owner had been to see so many of "his people" listening to a lecture on astronomy the night before!

I shall not try to describe what I saw. No doubt it was a sight that ought to have made me thrill with admiration for the practical application of the great principle of "efficiency" which I saw before me, but in fact it only made me sad and depressed.

Pale Faces Obliterated Thought of Marvels of Machinery

I could not admire the marvelous machinery, could pay no attention to the wonderful statistics that were poured into my ears about the incredible number of this, that or the other things that could be turned out in a single minute, for I really saw nothing but pale, drawn faces, bent over the machines, not daring to look up for a moment, and white, bony fingers doing perilous feats with the darting shuttles, and I heard only the inhuman hum of the mechanical monsters that were devouring those young lives!

I have always regretted that there was an occasion when I had not the courage to say what I thought. But we all meet many such occasions. One reason why the world does not improve more rapidly is because we are too often moral cowards. However, I never think pleasantly of the name of that town, although it had listened very flatteringly to what I did say—but that was about the stars, and when you talk about them you can hurt no man's "business."

Such Conditions Prevail Throughout Entire Country

Of course such things are not confined to the South. In fact, it is to be feared that New England taught the lesson. Read the article to which I have referred if you want a host of other facts about this nefarious business of killing off the young of the race, killing them soul and body, in order to swell the bloated carcass of Mammon! Then think seriously about what you have read, and, having thought, act; for modern civilization is doomed unless this unholy thing be destroyed!

We Must Send Them Out to Play

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

(Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.)

NOW much there is need of doing must not be done in haste;
But slowly and with patience, as a jungle is changed to a town,
But listen, my brothers, listen; it is not always so.
When a murderer's hand is lifted to kill, there is no time to waste;
And the way to change his purpose is first to knock him down
And teach him the law of kindness after you give him the blow.

The acorn you plant in the morning will not give shade at noon;
And the thornless cactus must be bred by year on year of toil.
But listen, brothers, listen; it is not ever the way.
For the roots of the poison plant you cannot pull too soon;
If you would better your garden and make the most of your soil,
Hurry and dig up the evil things and cast them out today.

The ancient sin of the nations no law can ever efface;
We must wait for the mothers of men to grow, and give clean souls to their sons.
But listen, my brothers, listen—when a child cries out in pain,
We must rise from the banquet board and go, though the host is saying grace;
We must rise and find the Herod of Greed, who is killing our little ones,
Nor ever go back to the banquet until the monster is slain.

The strong man waits for justice, with lifted soul and eyes,
As a sturdy oak will face the storm, and does not break or bow.
But listen, my brothers, listen; the child is a child for a day;
If a merciless foot treads down each shoot, how can the forest rise?
We are robbing the race when we rob a child; we must rescue the children NOW;
We must rescue the little slaves of Greed and send them out to play.
